THE WOMAN IN THE CASE

This new and strikingly beautiful picture of Evelyn Nesbit-Thaw has never hitherto been published. Dressed in carnival costume, the young woman, who has posed for the best artists of America, is shown here in one of her most fetching gowns and bewitching moods. It was the chameleon-like loveliness of Evelyn Nesbit, ever changing to suit the ideals of her many friends, that made such powerful appeal to her men acquaintances and was the real cause of the tragedy under the white light of Madison Square Garden's towering dome.

THAW INQUEST

Wife Was Determined to Be Present, But Lawyer Persuaded Her to Remain Away---Jury, After Brief Deliberation, Finds White Was Slain by Thaw.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The coroner's jury which heard the evidence offered in the inquest as to the death of Stanford White, the noted architect, after deliberating three minutes, returned a verdict to-day that White came to his death from cerebral hemorrhage as the result of a pistol shot wound in the skull, inflicted with a revolver in the hands of the defendant, Harry Thaw.

Thaw, himself, appeared more composed than he has heretofore since the tragedy, at the inquest. The hearing lasted but a short time, Coroner Dooley not going into any of the merits of the case.

Mrs. Thaw Kept Out.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the beautiful wife of the young millionaire, pleaded with her husband's counsel to be allowed to appear at the side of her husband during the court proceedings, but former Judge Olcott persuaded her not to do so.

"I want to be at my husband's side at that inquest."

This message was sent to Coroner Dooley's court by Mrs. Thaw about a quarter of an hour before the time set for the beginning of the inquest.

Mrs. Thaw was in the office of her husband's counsel, Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge, when she sent this word to former Judge W. M. K. Olcott, who had gone earlier to the Criminal Courts Building to look after Harry Thaw's interests.

Mrs. Thaw was called to appear before the Grand Jury and had decided that she would refuse to testify. Her plea to come to the inquest was sent to Mr. Olcott by special messenger. As soon as he read it he went to a telephone booth and did all he could to induce Harry Thaw's actress-wife to stay away.

"You will only subject yourself to the public gaze and create unnecessary excitement," he told her, "without doing your husband any particular good."

PLACE AT HUSBAND'S SIDE.

"Well, I don't care. I want to come," came back the young woman's answer. "My place is at Harry's side at a time like this."

Mr. Olcott did all he could to induce her to remain in his office until the time set for her to go before the Grand Jury, but he got only a weak promise from her that she would accede to his wishes. Mr. Olcott was smiling and mopping his brow when he came back to the court room from the telephone.

It was exactly 10 o'clock when the twelve men comprising the coroner's jury filed into their seats at the left of the coroner's high stand. Thaw was brought from his cell in the Tombs at 9:50. He was handcuffed to special officer Kennedy.

Thaw spent a good night in his cell. He slept well and was in good condition this morning to face any ordeal or situation that the day might bring forth. He arose at 6:30 o'clock and took a sponge bath and then breakfasted on boiled eggs, toast and coffee. After eating he lit a big black cigar and read the morning papers until summoned to appear in the coroner's court.

The inquest was late in getting started. The hour set was 9:30 o'clock, but it was 10:20 o'clock before Coroner Dooley began the proceedings. Former Judge Olcott, representing Thaw, was on hand early, accompanied by Terrance McManus of the same firm. Assistant District Attorney Garvan appeared for the State.

The court room was crowded when the hearing began.

When Thaw came in there was a great craning of necks. He walked steadily to a seat at the table of his counsel and sat next to Judge Olcott. Thaw wore a gray business suit and a straw hat. A white handkerchief was stuck in the collar of his coat in place of a collar, the young man's supply of linen at the Tombs being exhausted. His hair was slightly rumpled. He faced coolly the crowd which stared at him. He talked with his attorneys during nearly the entire hearing. Once or twice he smiled in these talks.

Thaw will refuse to give any evidence before this body, standing on his rights as the wife of the accused man. She declared that she would go to jail for contempt before she would assist in the prosecution of her husband.

While the legal machinery was being put in motion to punish Thaw for the killing of White, the body of the dead man was being carried back deep into the country, far from the Broadway rush and roar, where it was laid to rest in a little cemetery bordered by locusts and fragrant with the odors of wild roses.

The body of the man who had lived his life in the Great White Life and who had died in its grave, was not placed in the family burial plot at Woodlawn. It was said that the family desired to escape the morbid crowd.

THAW TO BE INDICTED.

That Thaw will be indicted for murder in the first degree by the Grand Jury to-day is expected by his counsel. Then the great fight will be begun for his life—a fight in which millions and morals will prove paramount features.

Thaw's attorneys would be satisfied to base their fight on the plea of insanity. Thaw himself takes a bolder stand. He proposes to establish, if possible, that when he stuffed out the life of the architect he is justified by the great unwritten law that has been recognized since civilization began.

Should the case ever reach trial, it is said that conditions of the under world which have been hidden by the patsount hand of wealth for years will be uncovered and the most startling expose of shocking immorality made that America has ever seen.

Not White alone, it is pointed out, would suffer by such a course, but men who still live and move in circles that would be contaminated with shame if the X-ray of truth should lay bare their lives.

The men of this realm will move heaven and earth, it is already foreshadowed, to keep this case from the publicity that would accompany a big murder trial.

Mrs. Thaw can refuse to answer questions before the grand jury on the ground that she might be incriminated or degraded or on the grounds of the confidential relations of husband and wife, which ground under the decisions of the courts in this State, is not definitely settled in many features.

"If Mrs. Thaw," said Mr. Nott, "refuses to answer questions which are legal, it will be necessary to bring her before Judge Cowing and have her instructed as to her rights and privileges."

W'ULD BE CONTEMPT.

"Then, if she persist in refusing to

YALE WINS FOUR-OARED AND FRESHMAN RACES

YOUNGSTERS HAVE HEARTBREAKING STRUGGLE FROM START TO FINISH.

NEW LONDON, June 28.—Yale won the freshman eight-oared race after a splendid and gallant struggle, which kept the admirers of both crews in a ferment of excitement from the start to the finish. Yale won by nearly a boat length.

The sons of Eli made a strong finish, overcame the lead of Harvard and ran their boat's prow ahead of the Crimson boys, all within 200 yards of the finish.

The Yale crew finished strong and rowed away from their broadbeamers, while three of Harvard's crew collapsed in the boat.

Yale's time for the two miles was 10:03 2-5. Harvard's time was 10:41 flat.

Yale Led at Start.

After a false start the crews, about 10:34, started again, with Yale in the lead and both rowing a steady stroke. There was little change in their positions until near the mile, when Stroke Cutler of Harvard increased the pace of the setup and the Harvard boat shot out in the lead.

The crew of Yale maintained a steady stroke, and made no effort to overcome Harvard's lead until within 200 yards of the finish line. Then Stroke Meyer hit up the pace, and the men in the Yale boat, bending their backs to the task, gave several long quick sweeping strokes which shot out their boat to the fore. Harvard had shot her bow and a vain effort was made to spurt, but Yale had the race in her hand and won by three-quarters of a boat length.

Yale Four Wins.

Yale also won the four-oared varsity race easily by eight lengths.

At the pistol, in the four-oared race, Harvard jumped to the front, but Yale was after them and creeping up slowly.

Harvard spurted at every move of the Eli oarsmen and led at the quarter-mile post. At three-eighths mile Harvard held her advantage. Both crews were rowing strongly, but Harvard seemed to be hitting the faster pace.

At the mile mark Yale's mighty strokes began to tell, and she went into the lead. Harvard still maintained her faster stroke, but Yale held to its head. Under the straits Harvard splashed some.

Yale's long, smooth stroke carried her along, and the Harvard shell began dropping behind. When the crews disappeared from sight behind the bend Yale had a couple of lengths and was increasing the distance at every dip in the water.

The gap widened till Yale had three lengths and still there was no response from the Harvard men.

Yale finally crossed the line leading by eight lengths.

PROHIBITIONISTS NAME MORAN AS CANDIDATE

District Attorney John B. Moran to-day accepted an offer from Chairman John A. Nichols of the Prohibition State Committee to be the Prohibition party candidate for Governor of this State this Fall.

Chairman Nichols, on behalf of the State Committee, made the offer to Mr. Moran previous to the opening of the Prohibition State Convention here to-day. Later, at the convention, Chairman Nichols said:

"John B. Moran will be our candidate for Governor. I had a final interview with him in his office this morning before the convention and he accepted the nomination on a platform which I submitted to him.

"The platform calls for allegiance to the Prohibition cause and for the impartial enforcement of all law and for the exposure of political corruption."

Expect Moran Will Get It.

It is expected by Chairman Nichols and other leaders in the party that Mr. Moran will receive the nomination without trouble. There may be a few straggling candidates, but it is anticipated that the nomination will ultimately be made unanimous.

The convention was scheduled to open at 10:30 in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational building, No. 14 Beacon street. On account of tardiness of delegates it was not opened till 11, when 100 delegates were on hand. Among the delegates was one woman, Mrs. Corinne M. Cleveland of No. 22 Waverly avenue, Newton.

Five other women were there, but not as delegates. Noticeable among them was Julia R. F. Miller, who has attended every State prohibition convention for the past thirty years. Her sight is failing and she has much trouble getting about, but her enthusiasm is undi-

WHITE'S SON CRIES 'I'LL AVENGE FATHER'

NEW YORK, June 28.—Lawrence G. White, the son of Stanford White, the famous architect who was shot and killed by Harry Kendall Thaw because of White's persistent attempt to renew the acquaintance with his young and beautiful wife which he had before their marriage, today swore vengeance against the slayer of his father if he should escape punishments in the courts.

Young White is in his second year at Harvard. He dined with his father at Martin's on last Monday evening, leaving him just before White went to the Madison Square Roof Garden, where he met his death. This is the impassioned declaration of the young man, which it is believed was called forth partly by the conviction that seems to be prevalent that it will be shown that Thaw's act was premeditated.

"While a breath is in my body or a dollar in my pocket I will seek only for vengeance against the man who murdered my father.

"If Harry Thaw is freed of this murder charge, or if he gets a term of imprisonment, he may be sure that I will get even as soon as he is free.

"He murdered my father in cold blood. He was the best father that ever lived. He loved the Broadway life, but he never did half the things that are charged to him.

"I am only a young man, but I have a life before me, and I will spend it in seeing that justice is done."

Mrs. Thaw Subpoenaed.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the wife of the young millionaire charged with murder, appeared at the Criminal Courts Building, having been subpoenaed to testify before the Grand Jury. It was said that Mrs.

the evidence which is not protested on the confidential communications or the protection given by statute. It may be necessary to have her adjudged guilty of contempt and punished by fine and imprisonment until such time as she may be willing to purge herself of contempt.

POLICE AFTER RICH DENS.

The district attorney's office has already begun an investigation into the lives and deeds of a set of rich, powerful, prominent New Yorkers, who have always been licensed to go beyond the law. Quite a score of men who have never known the slightest fear of investigation are now on the grill, according to the information which the BOSTON AMERICAN secured yesterday at the criminal courts building.

So powerful is this clique that it is becoming trouble of a serious nature to them, and it is reported that several of them yesterday by paid emissaries, some of whom are even in the employ of the county of New York. These promises to be an exodus to Europe which will surpass that which followed the revelations of the life insurance scandal.

POLICE HAVE NAMES.

The names of the men who will find themselves under a searching investigation as to their personal lives were naturally refused by the assistant district attorneys who are in charge of the case.

Many of them were friends of Stanford White and participated in his revels in the studio in the tower of Madison Square Garden, the Rivoli and the house on West Twenty-eighth street. Others who will surely be involved would not have known White had they met him face to face, but from the similarity to their crimes against womankind they are likely to be called upon to pay the penalty.

The law is moving with unusual swiftness in this case, as it always will when a community is aroused to a realizing sense of the outrages committed against it. Harry Thaw was taken yesterday before the board of alienists and examined as to his sanity. He has offered medical officers by refusing to answer any questions, even though Judge Olcott, his chief attorney, was in the room and advised that he answer.

HAS MIND OF HIS OWN.

The tyrannical instinct that he was sane, and showed that his wish was to stand trial and make his plea to a jury on the strength of the question law. He promises to be a defendant with a mind of his own.

If he follows what appeared yesterday to be his sober determination, he is likely to upset the best laid plans of the counsel for the defense, but of the prosecution as well. This mental examination yesterday was ordered by the district attorney's office in order to avoid any repetition of the fiasco of the Terranova trial. Three of Abraham D. Mathews, Jerome and Macdonald declared that the prisoner was sane.

He declared it himself and for a time was in a huff when friends and counsel-less tried to explain to him that insanity was to be his defense. The doctors based their belief for his supremacy and his manner. He would not answer their questions

WIFE SEES HUSBAND.

For the first time since she threw her arms around his neck while he still held the revolver which had snuffed out Stanford White's life, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw saw her husband yesterday. The meeting took place in the Tombs and the steel bars of Thaw's cell separated them.

A million dollars will be spent to save young Thaw from the chair if such an amount is necessary. Already it is reported that they are dealing with a remarkable client. They would be willing to prove him insane and let it go at that.

The possibility that Thaw himself may balk any defence of this sort has enlisted all possible resources of his rich family in the development of evidence of the shocking immorality in which it is said to have indulged for years. This line of investigation will also be followed to a certain extent by the District Attorney's office, but for the purpose of their case it will not be necessary to go into the depths of the private life. The Thaws, however, will know no limits in their investigation.

SEARCH VICE EVIDENCE.

Already their detectives are getting in touch with the creatures of White's Bohemia, the women who danced at his studio although not quite so nature was being painted, drank his champagne and died about the apartments. All the darkness of automobiles which he had at his command.

Mrs. White's face was a study as the face of her husband's conduct, of which she could not have been ignorant, has excited much sympathy. Where a woman has lost her husband has a son that she loves as her own life, and Stanford White was all that to her. He is a young man now, and his care for his mother has made him a man whose life would have been beyond price considering the husband's extravagance.

White's body lay all day yesterday at his late residence, 121 East Twenty-second street. There was there in a state of semi-seclusion, attended by her sister, Mrs. J. Ricombed Wetherill and Mr. Prescott Hall Butler, a cousin. Mrs. Lawrence brought the widow in from the country prior to the funeral. Friends came and went in a house of sorrow during the day and night, and the screened casket rested at the curbstone on the coach bearing the remains to the scene of the tragedy.

SPECIAL FUNERAL TRAIN.

Early this morning a special funeral train left the Long Island city station for St. James. There was a brief funeral service at the St. James Church, and then the body of the dead architect was interred in a family enclosure. Relatives, friends and intimate friends were carried on the special train which left the city at 9 o'clock and returns at 11:30.

Yesterday Thaw was taken from the Tombs, across the bridge of sighs and into the district attorney's office, where on the top floor of the criminal courts building he underwent an examination as to his sanity by alienists secured by the District Attorney.

From the very beginning of the "examination" he defied and baffled them.

"I AM NOT CRAZY,"

"he will not be examined to 'put men,' he declared. "I am not crazy. Where is my lawyer, any way?"

When the subject of a medical examination was submitted to Thaw in the Tombs by former Assistant District Attorney Ilyn he expressed a willingness to go any where and be mentally and physically examined, but when actually in the presence of the committee he refused to submit to any tests and would not answer any questions even when advised to do so by his counsel.

The county committee consisted of Dr. Frederick Peterson, Dr. Flint and Mr. Corbin, representing the District Attorney's office, and Dr. Allan MacLane Hamilton for the defense.

Assistant District Attorney Garvan looked out for the prosecution and Terrence McManus of the firm of Olcott, Gardner and Bonynge was present in the interests of Thaw.

Thaw came before the committee, which held its session in the grand jury room, in an excited state. He complained on the way from the Tombs that the deputy sheriff who had him in custody walked too fast.

The first hitch in the proceedings came in the refusal of Thaw to recognize Lawyer McManus as his counsel, and though Mr. McManus submitted proof that he was the accredited representative of former District Attorney Jerome, Thaw would not consult with him at all or accept any suggestions from Dr. Hamilton, his expert counsel.

"I insist upon Mr. Olcott being present," said Thaw. "I do not know what all this business is about and I insist that Mr. Olcott tell me."

Lawyer Olcott was communicated with over the telephone and appeared before the committee in about half an hour. Most of the time Thaw sat quietly in a chair looking at the ceiling, as if lost in thought.

Dr. Hamilton introduced Dr. Flint to Thaw, and Thaw said to him, "Has your son gone to Newport for the season?"

"No," said Dr. Flint. "He has gone to Yellowstone Park."

"That is a nice place," said Thaw. "I know your son well and wish I was with him."

The doctors here said Dr. Hamilton "began to examine you physically and mentally."

GEORGE CARNEGIE DECLARES THAT THAW IS INSANE

NEW YORK, June 28.—"Harry is crazy. He has been mad for years," said George Carnegie, Harry Thaw's brother-in-law yesterday, while strolling without the Hotel Lorraine, Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street.

Everybody who knows Harry is aware that the boy is irresponsible, and has been growing worse," continued Mr. Carnegie. "Further, persons who are not classed as his friends and have an interest in his welfare have noticed his mental condition. He is insane. That's all there is to it.

THAWS BOOKED TO SAIL WITH WHITE

NEW YORK, June 28.—Various associations were made to-day in the case of Harry Kendall Thaw, Stanford White and Mrs. Evelyn Florence Nesbit Thaw which were said to have a direct bearing on the mur-

White, were booked to sail to-day on the La Provence, the new flyer of the French Transatlantique line.

Not only were they booked to sail, but it is understood on excellent authority that Mrs. Thaw and Mrs. Thaw were also to be passengers on this boat, belong to the same party. Mr. and Mrs. Thaw are all against White, the fact that they were all to be passengers on the same boat puzzles the police.

FEAR OF EXPOSURES MAY PREVENT TRIAL

NEW YORK, June 28.—If the efforts of not only the Thaw family and their friends, but also, it is believed, the family and friends of Stanford White, can avail, Harry Thaw never will be placed on trial for the murder of White.

The family of the most prominent lawyers of New York and Pittsburg will be devoted to that end. Every advantage, every bit of the millions and millions of dollars that the Thaw family declare will be used to save him, will be for that one purpose.

An exposure—that is what an open trial means. The raking over of all the old scandals, the delving into Thaw's past life, the making public of all of the shame and ignominy of his relations with Evelyn Nesbit, what it meant when the Thaw family introduced her to Pittsburg society and stood sponsor for her, that is what an open trial will mean to the Thaw family. And to prevent it all of the Thaw millions are available.

For White, for the dead man who is to be buried to-day, to him an open trial means more in shame and disgrace and ignominy than to anyone else living or dead.

White had made arrangements with the friend, whose name is not given, to go to Vienna with him. The two had crossed together eight times. They were to meet some acquaintances in Vienna on July 14. White was engaged as architect for a large house in that city, and his friend, who is a dealer in antiques in this city, was to supply furniture for it. The friend will fulfil his part of the contract without Mr. White. Mr. Delany and his daughter will also sail to-day.

FOLLOW AMERICAN'S LEAD IN RAILROAD MERGER WAR

Legislative Committee Recommends Action by Attorney-General in the Courts.

After laboring long into the night, the Committee on Railroads and Street Railways of the Legislature brought forth today a bill based on the suggestion made in the BOSTON AMERICAN on June 14, which is, in effect, that the present law forbidding railroads to absorb street railways be enforced by the Attorney-General.

The second section provides that foreign railroad corporations shall be prohibited from acquiring any more street railways. But great care is taken by a special provision that nothing shall be done to prevent railroads taking street railways which they are contracting for or constructing.

The bill was reported in the House today. Friends of Governor Guild consider it a slap at him, as it absolutely carries out the recommendations of his special message. Inasmuch as it does not compel the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad to give up the street railways it has gobbled up or has arranged to gobble up.

Attorney-General Malone has told the committee politely that he was displeased and disappointed with their report, and that he would not accept the recommended bill as a substitute for his own. Friends of Governor Guild think that some consideration has been given the message of President Mellen of the New York road and his attorney, Charles F. Choate, Jr., him who gives the special message to the Legislature.

On the other hand members of the Committees on Railroads and Street Railways are wondering why the Governor rose up to the idea of sending in a special message. In a word, the old-timers on the committees are claiming that the Governor's message was a political move.

It is the general opinion of members of the Legislature that the BOSTON AMERICAN was the great stirring because of the fact that the committee has followed its lead in requesting the Attorney general to proceed against the foreign railroad corporations under the laws already on the statute books, and compel them, under those laws, to give up the street railways they have absorbed and to refrain from absorbing more in the future.

Boston American's Petition of June 14 Against Railway Trust

WHEREFORE your petitioner prays that the attorney-general shall file a suit in the Supreme Judicial Court in the nature of a quo warranto, or such other legal or equitable action as he may deem proper, on behalf of and at the expense of the Commonwealth and by or under the immediate direction of the attorney-general, to have such ownership and control to be declared illegal and void; to have the said stocks now owned by the said New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company in electric street railways in this Commonwealth disposed of, and for an injunction preventing the said ownership, control and conduct of the said electric street railways, as purchased by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, and for such other and further relief arising out of such misuser of its franchise, and for the forfeiture of such franchise, if such action shall be lawful, as to the court shall seem meet.

Recommendation of Legislative Committee for War on R. R. Trust

SECTION 1—The Attorney-General is hereby authorized to institute proceedings in the Supreme Judicial Court to determine the question whether the acquisition of stock, bonds or other securities of street railway companies in this Commonwealth by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, the Consolidated Street Railway Company of Connecticut, or by subsidiary or holding companies owned or controlled by them, or either of them, is legal or illegal, and said court shall have jurisdiction in equity to hear and determine the same, and shall advance any cause or causes instituted hereunder to speedy hearing and decision.

SENSATIONAL REVELATIONS OF GILDED VICE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 28. The police today began to probe into the private life of Stanford White to see if they could find a cause for his tragic death on last Monday evening.

The investigation has already shown that there is an organized band of rich clubmen and artists who make victims of young girls of the stage, of the shops and of the poorer homes. Their treatment of these girls, many of them mere children, is too brutal for description.

Called Them "Little Parties."

"Little parties" is the way the devotees love to characterize their revels. The police are now probing for details as to the hosts and guests at these "little parties."

Chief among the episodes recalled last night in the Tenderloin in which Stanford White and his band of cronies in social set so-called "fl" circles figured so prominently were the dinners given by two of his closest friends, James Lawrence Breese, the society artist, and Robert Reid, the noted clubman and ecclesiastical decorator.

The Breese dinner, which became famous for "the girl in the pie" incident, was held in Breese's Carlton Studio, No. 5 West Sixteenth street, his present home. Breese, Stanford White and Robert White were the organizer of a club called "The Carlton Twelve," which took its name from the Breese studio, one of the most luxuriously equipped places of its kind in the world. The favorites of that dinner were many and various, but the climax was reached when the dessert was opened and a girl, nearly naked, entered bearing a mammoth pie, from which, at a given signal, and to the strains of the nursery ballad, "Four and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie," Susie Johnson, a fifteen-year-old model, scantily draped in black, with wings attached to her shoulders, burst forth. As the child emerged she released twenty-four canaries, which flew around the room that had been transformed into a bower of roses.

Names of Guests Present.

The following named men were present as guests:

John Elliott Cowdin, Robert Reid, J. Alden Weir, Cooper Hewitt, Henry W. McVickar, Augustus St. Gaudens, Stanford White, Charles McKim, Charles Dana Gibson, John D. Cheever, William Astor Chanler, W. Rutherford Mead, Robert Hewson, J. Kennedy Tod, George E. Perkins, William T. Lawson, John H. Twachtman, Thomas L. Manson, Jr., James Barnes, Harry C. Mortimer, H. Sandham, Alfred L. Collins, Edward Simmons, Willard Metcalf, John Alexander Dwenroth and John Angus Mitchell.

As the guests vied with one another in lady eagerness to honor this child model, taken from the fenements only a few months before by an artist named Thomas Sheafe Clark to nobody knows the size of the palaces of art maintained by rich men of the Stanford White clique.

The New Model Vanishes.

Two days after the revel Sadie Johnson disappeared. Her mother, distracted, made the rounds of the studios in vain. All the artists professed ignorance of the whereabouts of the girl. Then the mother went to the police and Breese, it is said, experienced some trouble in stopping the woman's clamor.

Soon the rich friend tired of Sadie. She was cast forth penniless and found employment in the home of a friend. For two years she remained there. Then she was suddenly sent by her employer to Europe, later by her husband when he heard of the "pie" affair.

At another of Mr. Breese's banquets Mrs. Elmer Smith and Mr. Cadwallader did a "song and dance" in black face. During the revels a girl attending Miss George de Forrest's dress caught fire and she was saved from serious injury by champagne from the glasses of the guests.

Mrs. Breese's daughter, Dillon, given in the Gibson studios. In fact Thirty-third street was of the same character as Fourteenth.

OLD MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION NEEDED IN NEW YORK---DR. PETERS

Go the rounds of the cafes, where wealth abounds and beauty smiles, and what do you see? Old men with young girls—men old enough to be their fathers, and even grandfathers.

WE HAVE SPLENDIDLY EQUIPPED YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS. WHAT NEW YORK NEEDS IS AN OLD MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. NEW YORK WOULD NOT BE NEARLY THE WICKED CITY IT IS IF OUR OLD AND MARRIED MEN WERE DECENT.

Every man who has daughters, every man who has a sister, should join a movement to drive out of the city these seducers of innocent girlhood. Lift up your voice against the edict of society that casts out the seduced and smiles upon the seducer.

Let us rid New York of these loathsome, putrid animals, luxurious in inherited or appropriated wealth.

New Yorkers will not listen to sermons from pulpits. This sermon from the pistol shot of revenge will teach a lesson—but one that will be forgotten in a few days.

—Rev. Madison C. Peters of New York

Today started in hotter than yesterday by at least two degrees, but a slight drop came with a breeze at noon, when two degrees were knocked down, leaving the mercury hesitating at 80 degrees.

Whether this will be permanent or not the weather men decline to guess. They will only refer to the future. Here it is: "Partly cloudy, continued warm tonight and Friday; light southwesterly winds."

Key West, Fla., is the hottest place in the United States and at 8 o'clock this morning the thermometer measured 82 degrees of heat. Yellow spots, 100 in a row, even void, for the mercury registered but 86. At 8 o'clock this morning New York thermometers indicated 74, while Boston was two degrees warmer.

WIFE LOCKED OUT WHITE AND WOMEN

NEW YORK, June 28. Perhaps the coolest woman in Thaw's life aspect is the position of the family of the murdered man. Friends of Mrs. White has known for years of the dual life which her husband led in New York, but at first he kept it from her as much as possible. It is said, as the facts were forced upon her he grew careless.

Lastly was the night he, his death to steal a big touring car with beauties of the Tenderloin and drove them in his country place at St. James, one of the prettiest exclusive residence settlements of Long Island. He knew then, it is declared, that Mrs. White was occupying the country home.

Although it was nearly midnight, she met him at the door. She told him with the dignity and force of a Spartan mother that she could not bring his guests into the house. White, huge in form, powerful in every muscle despite his life, insisted in terms that could not be printed. The door was slammed in his face and Mrs. White locked it.

"Oh, no," cried White, as the St. James

"I tell things I have heard about Stanford White, or half of them, even, are true, he richly deserved his fate at the hands of young Thaw. Complaint was made to me about a year ago of the life he was leading in his studio in the tower of Madison Square Garden. We were quite certain that young girls were being led there to their ruin. The outrage of such behavior on the part of a man of White's wealth and prominence impressed the society, and two men were detailed to watch the studio.

"Thaw called on me several weeks ago to tell me of White. He explained his own trouble and told of many young girls whom White had ruined. He cited various instances and declared that he had the proof. He was much worked up over the whole affair and the news of the tragedy was not a great surprise to me."

COMSTOCK TO WAR ON MEN LIKE WHITE

NEW YORK, June 28.—The murder of Stanford White on the roof of Madison Square Garden last Monday night by Harry Thaw is going to bring about a war on moral perverts in New York. Anthony Comstock, of the Society for the Prevention of Vice, has already begun work in this crusade, as Harry Thaw had taken him into his confidence two weeks before the murder.

"I will drive every moral pervert out of New York," said Mr. Comstock with the utmost decision to an AMERICAN reporter who saw him last night at his country home, No. 55 Beckman road, Summit, N. J. "Let me repeat that the moral pervert must go. The murder of Stanford White has given us an opening wedge that we have long needed.

"The investigation must go on now to the bitter end, without fear or favor, no matter how rich or how prominent or how brilliant the perverts may be. The trails will lead into the most exclusive clubs, and many a man who has been generally held in the highest esteem must be tumbled into the mire, where he belongs.

MILLIONS OF VOTES FOR TEACHERS WORK SCORE OF BUSY COUNTERS DAY AND NIGHT

Names of Winners and How to Plan For Trip in Next Sunday's Boston American.

More than a score of men, girls and boys are working day and night to count the millions of votes received on the last day of the European Tour Contest. By Saturday noon they will be canvassed thoroughly, recorded, revised and stamped with the seal of correctness by a professional expert.

Mail bag after mail bag was taken from the postoffice yesterday representing the ballots deposited in the more remote places by friends of the teachers who may or may not be, in the final accounting, the successful candidates.

In this mail came thousands of dollars as the result of the last day's campaigning in the various districts outside of Boston, the votes being recorded on the Special Ballot printed in SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN.

Winners Named Sunday.

Next SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN will announce the winners and give all the necessary details of how the forty fortunates and most popular teachers should plan for the great European Trip.

VOTES BY MILLION AN D COUNTERS AT WORK

From photographs made in office of Boston American.

By Saturday Noon They Will Be Canvassed, Recorded, Revised and Stamped Correct.

In next SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN the winners and all the friends of all the teachers for whom votes have been cast during this contest will find complete details of how the voting finished and of the preparation for the departure of the two steamers.

Arabic Sails July 5.

Who will be the winners? See next SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN. The steamship Arabic will sail with the teachers who have won the Grand and European Tours on the morning of July 5. Just one week from to-day. Those who take the Shakespearian Tour will have a little longer time to make preparations for the departure, for they will not leave until one week later.

The cash prizes are going to help those who win. The names of the winners of the six cash prizes will be published next Sunday.

Votes were received yesterday from the Philippines and Porto Rico. That shows how wide the interest in this contest has been. Friends of the teachers who are starting for away in the Philippines and Porto Rico have filled in the ballots, which their copies of the BOSTON AMERICAN contained and sent them thousands of miles to the European Tour Editor.

The European Tour Editor feels particularly gratified at the unanimous way with which the contest closed. Always allowing for the natural errors which may be expected with so many million individuals concerned, this BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN European Tour Election has been and is being concluded with less necessity for correction than any similar contest that has been conducted by any great metropolitan newspaper. Letters are received by every mail from Boston and from every other district in New England expressing satisfaction and thanks for the carefulness with which this contest has been conducted.

BAILEY DENIES ANY TREASON IN U. S. SENATE

Texas Member Tells Upper House Magazine Charges Are Not True.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The first reply in the Senate to the series of articles running through the Cosmopolitan Magazine under the head of "The Treason of the Senate" was made yesterday by Senator Bailey, who spoke especially of the attack upon himself and generally of the attacks upon other Senators.

He spoke of the published matter as "false and offensive."

"If I considered it purely and only from a personal point of view," he said, "I should not regard it as worthy of any notice, for nothing in which this magazine can say will injure me with my constituents or in the estimation of those with whom I have served in either house of Congress."

Mr. Bailey then discussed at length the charge in the magazine article that he lent himself to a scheme whereby the Anti-Trust law of Texas had been evaded by a foreign corporation. Of this he said that it had been "thoroughly investigated by the very Legislature which elected me to the Senate, and it was shown to be so entirely unjust and absurd that the decent men among my most implacable enemies in Texas no longer discuss it."

To Senator made reference to the magazine charge that he had been a party to an effort to obtain the Indians of Indian Territory out of their coal lands, which would have been successful but for the efforts of Senator La Follette.

He then called upon Mr. La Follette to say whether he (Mr. Bailey) had not cooperated with him in what he (Mr. La Follette) had done.

The Wisconsin Senator responded promptly, saying:

"I take great pleasure in saying I conferred with the Senator from Texas before I offered anything bearing on the disposition of the coal lands of Indian Territory, and that I received valuable advice as to what I proposed to do."

SLAYS ANGRY HUSBAND IN DEFENCE OF SISTER

JAMES MULKAY DIES FROM BULLET DURING QUARREL AT ROXBURY HOME.

To save his sister from being struck with a tea kettle in the hands of her husband, John Holleran, aged twenty-two, last night shot and killed James F. Mulkay in the latter's home at No. 55 Newcomb street, Roxbury. Holleran at once walked to the East Dedham police station, where he was held on a charge of "suspicion of murder" until the report of the medical examiner to-day.

Two shots were fired, the first going wild.

Holleran had been working in the Maine woods, but for the past few weeks had been visiting his married sister. Mulkay was steward at Hotel Thorndike and had been married only a year.

According to the story of the tragedy as told the police, Mulkay and his wife had been quarreling violently throughout the evening. Holleran had remained about the house, but had taken no part in the unruly battle. About 10 o'clock, according to the story, Mulkay became so enraged at his wife that he picked up a heavy tea kettle from the stove and aimed it at his wife, who screamed and fled into a corner.

Instantly her brother jumped to his feet and, drawing his revolver, fired twice at Mulkay, who staggered into a chair.

Holleran ran out of doors and to the East Dedham street police station, while Mrs. Mulkay ran shrieking up stairs to the top floor of the flat, where she aroused James M. Lacy and his wife.

Together they ran back to the Mulkay flat, where they found the man staring with open eyes and covered with blood. The police ambulance was summoned, but the man died before he reached the City Hospital.

Holleran was transferred to the Dudley street station, as the shooting occurred in that district, and Mrs. Mulkay was taken to the same station, where she was held in charge of the matron until her deposition is taken.

HEIRESS SUES FOR DIVORCE

BURLINGTON, June 28.—Mrs. Pauline Webb, heiress to the large property of the late J. S. Pierson, millionaire stock broker, has begun suit for divorce from her husband, W. H. Webb. In 1904 they went to Windsor, Ont., and were married, assuming the wedding after the ceremony was over. Mrs. Pierson objected to the match and the couple were separated for a time, but were reunited later. The suit will be tried here in September.

TO PROSECUTE 18 RAILROADS

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Attorney General Moody, to insure the safety of the traveling public, has directed several United States district attorneys to bring proceedings against eighteen railroads for violation of the safety appliance law, through failure to equip their cars with safety brakes. The fine for each offence is $100 and every day the law is violated is a separate offence. Fifty-two violations are charged against the Atlantic Coast Line.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES LABOR UNION COUNCIL BOSTON MASS. 96

That it is the intention of the international officers to push the campaign of organizing the eight-hour day line, was the report made at last night's meeting of the Printing Pressmen's Union by the delegates to the international convention held recently at Pittsburg. The international board of directors will confer with the International Bookbinders' Union and agree on a date for both organizations to enforce the eight-hour day.

Frank O'Neil of San Francisco, a delegate to the Pittsburg convention, addressed the Boston local last night. The newly elected officers opened their administration. Three applications for membership were received.

LATHERS WILL PARADE.

Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union voted to parade Labor Day at last night's meeting. The following committee of arrangements was appointed: Richard Getchell, William Cosme, Peter Carter, Charles Leavitt and John Nesbit. Communication was received from the New York Building Trades Council, stating that the local with the international union need not apply to the Carpenters District Council. Two new candidates were admitted to membership. The meeting was addressed by Charles Chase of the Brockton local.

METAL POLISHERS MOVE.

The Metal Polishers, Platers and Buffers' Union No. 95, Brass Workers Union No. 55, Chandelier Workers' Union No. 18, and Brass Molders' Union No. 192, will hold their meetings, beginning next Sunday, at No. 45 Eliot street, instead of Hollis hall, Washington and Hollis streets. The meeting nights will remain the same.

Next Sunday at 10 o'clock, District Council No. 4 will meet in Cabinetmakers' hall, No. 45 Eliot street. Delegates representing twenty-five locals in Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine and New Hampshire will be present.

HARDWOOD FINISHERS.

Antoine J. Eagle of Chicago, international president of the Upholsterers' Union, addressed last night's meeting of Hardwood Finishers' Union No. 100. Dennis Mulcahy, international president of the Amalgamated Woodworkers, also spoke. It was reported that only a few strikers were idle, the majority having secured work in union shops elsewhere. The next meeting of the union will be held Thursday night at No. 45 Eliot street, instead of Wednesday, the regular meeting night.

LABOR NOTES.

Ten dollars was donated to the striking bleachery workers of Waltham by the United Hatters last night.

Patton Makers' Association will hold an outing at Calumet, Saturday, July 7. No. 6 Engineers' Organizer S. M. Lord will visit Worcester to organize engineers there, and it is said the local in that city was founded.

The Team Drivers' District Council voted to prosecute any person writing the teamsters on those wheeled local trade circulars. The council will assist the lumber teamsters in their efforts to obtain a nine-hour half holiday.

Fifteen out of the seventeen locals in this city have been consolidated into the local union building of Iron and Brass Molders' Union.

Friends Malloy, international president of the Amalgamated Woodworkers, will address Cigarmakers' Union No. 54 to-night at No. 55 Hanover street.

Building Laborers District Council made arrangements for the state conference to be held to-night at No. 45 Eliot street. Delegates to attend from Lynn, Lawrence, Haverhill, Waltham, Newton, Quincy, Cambridge and Boston.

Members of Electrical Construction Union are requested to attend to-night's meeting at Washington street. The agreements expire Saturday, and action on new agreements will be taken to-night.

WIFE DEAD; TO SUE PHYSICIAN

Charging that the death of his young wife was due to the error of a physician, Arthur M. Seymour, who left Boston a little over four months ago for Denver, Col., where he is manager for the Sperry & Hutchinson Company, No. 1630 Stout street, is preparing to prosecute Dr. F. E. Prewitt of that city, because of an operation for appendicitis at St. Luke's Hospital on May 28, which resulted in death on June 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour were married in Boston a little over three years ago. She was Miss Mary Louise Tracy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Tracy of this city. Mr. Seymour's father is Andrew Seymour, psychist and chiropodist.

Arthur E. Seymour is a national figure in the Fraternal Order of Eagles, and while president of the Boston Aerie materially assisted in having the convention of that year held in Denver.

BODY OF UNKNOWN MAN IN HARBOR

The body of an unknown man was found in the water off Commercial Wharf by the harbor police this morning. It was taken to Bridge's undertaking rooms.

The man was evidently thirty-five years of age, five feet eight inches tall, weight 150 pounds, the hair brown and worn smooth face, sandy hair with a bald spot on the right front. The body was dressed in black coat and trousers, figured outing shirt and had black shoes and stockings.

FIGHTS $20,000 GIFT OF SISTER

Edward A. Hitchcock of No. 6 Lester place, Jamaica Plain, is to fight the legacy of $20,000 given to Williams College in the will of Miss Mary A. Hitchcock, announcement of which was made at the commencement exercises yesterday. He is the only surviving relative of Miss Hitchcock.

Hitchcock declared to-day that when his sister's will is offered for probate, on the 5th of July, it will be contested and that Williams College would not get the money.

N. J. COMPANY MUST PAY TAX.

Judge Hammond of the Supreme Court has sustained the action of City Collector Scollard in suing the American Felt Company, a New Jersey corporation, for an injunction restraining it from doing business in this State until taxes are paid to the amount of $320, assessed upon the company instead of upon the property owned here.

TO TRY TO PROROGUE TO-DAY.

The Legislature will endeavor to prorogue to-night. This will be possible if the bill from the joint railroads committee is put through. If the conference committee is in favor, if the conference committee reports and if a councillor is elected for the fourth district.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO READ

If beer is pure its moderate use is not injurious to the health. Physicians frequently prescribe beer on account of its nutritious qualities and its digestibility.

No. 8.

"One Touch of Nature."

By I. W. H.

WHICH is the drink that stands the test
That knowing ones all say is best,
That to life's pleasures adds a zest?
Pfaff's Lager.

What that dispels the gloom of mind,
Helps us the joys of life to find,
Helps make us true to all our kind?
Pfaff's Lager.

What drink invigorates and cheers,
Lightens the weight of all our years,
Which is the richest of all beers?
Pfaff's Lager.

What's the lager of choicest brew,
The one that's pure as mountain dew,
The beer that's best for me and you?
Pfaff's Lager.

Get Your Share of These Friday and Saturday Bargains

No one in this great New England community should miss these opportunities to buy trustworthy, seasonable merchandise at prices so far under ordinary figures that regular charges seem exorbitant. It required no less a buying force than is commanded by the Siegel chain of stores to assemble these offers. It would be an easy matter to demand and receive larger profits, but it is the policy of this house to give its customers the full benefit of any savings it may be successful in making, and a corps of alert and experienced buyers is constantly in the field searching for good things while other stores are content to buy and sell at standard prices.

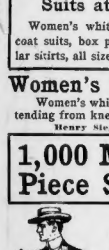
1,000 Men's 2-Piece Suits at $7.35



Here's another lot of two-piece suits for men that will not be found in any store in New England for less than $16, and yet, by buying 1,000 suits we got the price down so low that we shall sell them for $7.35. By so doing we give those who want a cool summer suit the best bargain they ever obtained.

The materials are the very best, the tailoring will satisfy the most critical, and the style is right up to the minute. At the beginning of the summer season we had similar suits at $16, but the manufacturer who sold these suits to us is devoting his time to fall and winter apparel, and wanted a complete clearance of this particular stock. Remember, there are 1,000 suits to be sold at the price, and that the sale lasts all of to-morrow and Saturday until closing time.

Blue Serge Suits $10.45

$18 values—cool and dressy for Summer wear—the word "swagger" was never better applied than to these Suits, selling elsewhere at $18 and $20.

Fancy Cheviot Suits $10.45

$18 values—light and Summery—patterns are the sweetest any house has ever shown—double and single breasted—sale will make them the talk of the town.

Any $25 Suit at $14.95

We hesitated between $18.95 and $14.95 as a special price. Blue Serge or two-piece Outing Suits of tropical worsted—single or double breasted—also fancy cheviots and smooth worsteds—same quality used by high priced tailors.

PROCTOR GRAND JURY RECORDS VS. WEAK REPUBLICAN MEMORIES

ADMITTED IN TRIAL AFTER HARD FIGHT

Leaders Now Say "I Don't Remember" in Case of Lodge's Private Secretary.

GOVERNMENT EVIDENCE IN

After saying at to-day's session of the trial of Senator Lodge's secretary, Robert G. Proctor, that "they could not remember," Colonel Thomas Talbot, chairman, and Joseph N. Peterson, treasurer, of the Republican State Committee, were confronted with the Grand Jury records in which each had testified positively that he received no contributions from John G. Bestgen through Robert G. Proctor.

Proctor is charged with larceny of $225.

Former Attorney General Parker fought hard against the admission of the Grand Jury stenographer's notes, but Judge De-Courcey decided that Assistant District Attorney Dennison would produce them.

At 11 o'clock the government's case was closed, and a recess was taken. The defence will go on this afternoon.

Jury Records Read.

John H. Farley, the court stenographer who took the Grand Jury testimony, read from his notes the statements made by Mr. Peterson and Colonel Talbot. Here is the testimony:

Joseph N. Peterson called and sworn.

Q.—Did you receive from Mr. Bestgen $225 in the year 1904? A.—No.

Q.—Did you receive a contribution of $225 which you were by anyone informed was from Mr. Bestgen? A.—No, sir.

Thomas Talbot called and sworn.

Q.—Now, in the year 1904, did you receive from Mr. Bestgen any money? A.—No.

Q.—Did you receive from Mr. Proctor any money? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know of Mr. Proctor turning over to anyone connected with the Republican State committee in 1904 $225 or a similar amount? A.—No, sir.

Yesterday neither Colonel Talbot nor Mr. Peterson could remember whether or not they had received money from either Mr. Bestgen or Senator Lodge's secretary.

Peterson on the Stand.

Before the Grand Jury records were introduced Mr. Peterson was called to the stand. He was asked by the assistant district attorney:

"Did Mr. Proctor at any time in the Fall of 1904 talk with you a detailed statement of any money received by him in behalf of the Republican State Committee?"

"No," answered the witness.

Colonel Talbot was again called to the stand. He identified a letter written by him to Mr. Bestgen on February 16, 1905, relative to the contribution.

"Did you at that time say 'So far as I know no such contribution was ever received'?" asked Mr. Dennison, reading from the letter.

Witness answered "Yes."

Q.—Whether or not did you say yesterday that you did not remember having received such contribution? A.—I can't remember.

Q.—Does the reading of the letter refresh your memory? A.—No.

Q.—You were in a different frame of mind regarding the contribution when I read question on February 16 than you were yesterday?

Here Mr. Parker jumped to his feet and made objection to the question. It was allowed, however, by Judge DeCourcey and witness answered "No."

Mr. Parker called the questioning along these lines an attack on the witness. As he interpreted the law the questions should be limited to inconsistencies in statements.

"Can't Say Positively."

"I understand the question is in regard to inconsistency," said Judge DeCourcey.

Mr Dennison resumed

"On February 16 you were positive you had received no money from Proctor, weren't you?"

A.—"So far as I knew."

Q.—"So far as you knew you hadn't?"

A.—Yes.

Mr. Parker asked the witness: "Having just again stated reflected by the recording of the letter can you or can you not say whether you received any such money?"

"I cannot say positively," replied Colonel Talbot.

With the dismissal of many of the witnesses, whose examination had been completed yesterday, there was a noticeable falling off in the attendance at the trial to-day. Senator Silas B. Brown, of Taunton testified briefly that so far as he was aware no contribution had been received from Proctor.

The latter declaration was similar to the statements of John F. Gill of Lowell and Percival Hodgett of Templeton, members of State Committee, and Arthur H. Fernald and Florence Avey, stenographers at campaign headquarters, who also testified not money from party contributors.

Willis Spaulding, cashier of the Winthrop National Bank, repository of the campaign fund, also testified that no moneys had been received at the bank from Proctor.

Memory Deserts Republican Leaders at Proctor Trial

THE District Attorney asks: "Did you receive in 1904 a contribution of $225 from John G. Bestgen through Mr. Proctor?"

"I do not know whether I did or not, for I do not remember"—Colonel Thomas Talbot, Chairman Republican State Committee.

Asked if he remembered replying in the Grand Jury room to that same question.

"No, I did not."

Colonel Talbot could not recall his reply.

I do not remember having received it (the contribution)"—James B. Reynolds, formerly executive clerk Republican State Committee.

"I do not know whether I did or not; I don't remember"—Joseph N. Peterson, treasurer Republican State Committee.

FEAR TROUBLE WITH RUSSIA

LONDON, June 28.—Diplomatic circles regard the reported seizure by Russia of the Aland Islands, which control the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia, as serious and likely to breed trouble. The reason given by Russia for the seizure is said to be that the residents of the islands supplied arms to the Finlanders.

The next move of Sweden is awaited with interest, as the islands are only thirty miles from Stockholm and form an important strategic position.

BIG LEAD DEALER KILLED UNDER AUTO

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Frank F. Stanwood, president of the North American Lead Company, was killed in an automobile accident last evening at Alton. A tire on the machine burst, overturning the machine and throwing the several occupants out. Stanwood was caught beneath the auto and crushed to death.

"HELLO" ROMANCE ENDS IN WEDDING

A romance of telephone "hellos," which began months ago, ended last night when Miss Mary Saunders, of Newton Upper Falls, was married to Charles A. Smith of Boston. The ceremony was performed in the parsonage of St. Mary's church by the Rev. Timothy J. Murphy. Mrs. Smith was a telephone operator in Newton Centre and her husband was an operator for the Associated Press.

8-HOUR BILL REPORTED.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The House committee on labor has filed a favorable report on the eight-hour bill, but it is not expected that the measure will be acted on at this session.

WOMAN SAVED IN BOAT BLAZE

NANTASKET, June 28.—Naphtha launch Lillian of South Boston, while starting away from the Nantasket Point landing last evening, was set on fire by a spark igniting gasoline leaking from the tank.

The blaze was extinguished by chemicals from the hotel. The cabin was entirely burned, but the hull was saved. A man and woman who rushed to the boat as flames were kindled were rescued, the man being badly burned.

HARVARD STUDENT DROWNED IN LAKE

WORCESTER, June 28.—Charles J. Stevens of this city, aged 21, a junior at Harvard and son of a wealthy real estate owner, while bathing at the dam on Lake Quinsigmond yesterday, was seized with cramps and drowned before aid could reach him.

BOSTON PAYS 4 PER CENT.

City Treasurer Slattery has borrowed $200,000 of the First National Bank at 4 per cent. The loan is dated June 30 and matures November 2 next.

ONLY 2 DAYS REMAIN.

Treatment, Medicine, Consultation, Examination With the X-Ray and a Chemical Analysis of the Urine Absolutely Free for One Month to All Patients Who Begin Treatment at the Office of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians on or Before June 30th. The new Leucodescent Ray an Unqualified Success. Read the Testimonials of the Cured Patients.

One month's treatment and medicine positively free, that is, without pay or compensation of any kind, are actually given to every patient applying for same on before June 30.

The offer is positively limited to these applying during the remaining days of June.

It covers all diseases and reflects to all patients.

The offer reduces by about one-third the price of same under the new and perfected method of the Osmo-Chemic physicians.

It is free and it is the most liberal offer ever known. To those who wonder how it may be possible to do so, we can say that the combined resources of the Osmo-Chemic physicians to sustain such an offer this year has fully justified them for the sake of demonstrating what genuine, free treatment, when offered for a period of time, amounts to. Heretofore only offer now and then, and for a limited number of patients. They have limited the number of those who apply and are placed under treatment on or before July 1st. Only those are entitled to its advantages.

Every patient applying for a course of treatment, and old patients receiving treatment on or before June 30th, shall receive one month's Treatment Free, and shall be given during this free month the same care and attention, the same medicines and treatment that he would receive if he was paying the regular rate. The offer is positively limited, however, to those applying on or before June 30th.

LEUCODESCENT RAYS

What the Leucodescent Ray do:

1). The "Leucodescent" Ray is not only known to increase the nutrition of living animals and vegetable cells, thus promoting abnormally healthy tissue, but they are a powerful destroyer of germ life—bacteria, etc.

2). The germ-destroying power of the ray is so great that in direct proportion to its intensity, which is up to a certain degree of concentration, is it destructive to healthy animal tissue.

3). The only therapeutic light that can be used with certainty of positive and absolute safety in all cases.

A pamphlet explaining by its intense, curative action, lighting-creating force upon the nerve cell.

NO DIPLOMA, HE RUNS AWAY

Boyish grief and shame because he was unable to get his graduation diploma from the Mary Hemenway Grammar School, on account of having to give his time to helping out his mother and younger brothers and sisters, are thought to have caused the disappearance from home of Danny Redhouse of No. 1 Charles street, Dorchester.

Danny was the BOSTON AMERICAN newsboy at Field's Corner. His mother, Mrs. Daniel Redhouse, is a widow, and Danny, the sixteen-year-old son, earned all the money he could to give his mother. He worked so hard, his mother says, that he had to neglect his studies. Recently he was told that, when his classmates were graduated on June 26, he would not be given a diploma.

June 19 he left home. He packed in his suit case a new blue serge suit, one his mother had bought for him to wear at the expected graduation. Danny wore away a dark brown mixed "every-day" suit he had, his sweater with the "A" of the Arcadia Baseball Club on the front, brown stockings and low shoes.

TO MEET $1,320 THEFT CHARGE

Rucy B. Rees, a South American shoe expert, charged with the larceny of $1,320 from George Dickinson of No. 222 Market street, Lynn, surrendered himself at police headquarters to-day.

Dickinson alleges that various consignments of shoes were turned over by him to Rees as agent, to be shipped to South American customers, and that Rees sold them in local markets and pocketed the proceeds, amounting in all to $1,222.

It is said that Rees was absent from home when the warrant for his arrest was issued yesterday, but as soon as he heard that the police had been taken he gave himself up. He leaves at Hotel Canterbury, Charlesgate West.

TWIN SISTERS ONLY GRADUATES

The Sel te High School will hold a commencement program Friday night for a class of two graduates, the twin sisters Esther and Mary Spaulding. Had it not been that they had completed the work of two years in one by hard study, the school would have had no graduates this year at all.

It is expected that a crowd will turn out at the graduation exercises Friday night, when the two pluckly girls, both of whom are just eighteen, will be presented with their graduation diplomas. The two girls are planning to attend Wellesley in the Fall.

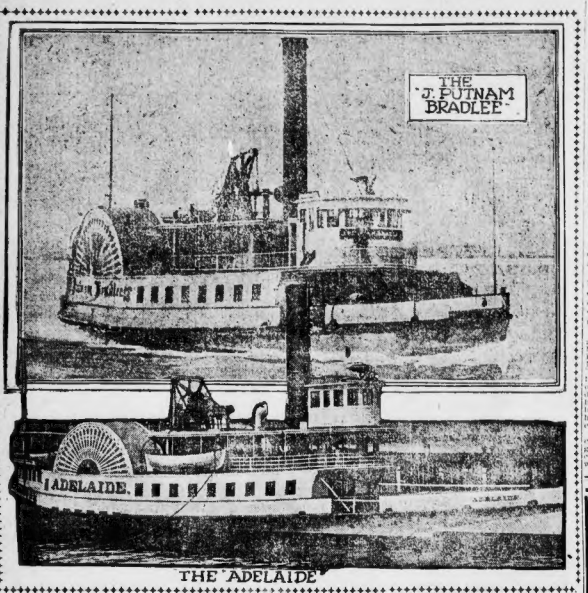
CITY BOAT SOLD AS JUNK LICENSED TO CARRY 700



THE ADELAIDE

TWO VIEWS BEFORE AND AFTER OF THE BOAT THE CITY SOLD FOR A SONG

The upper picture shows the steamer, then known as the J. Putnam Bradlee, before it was disposed of by the city; the lower picture shows the boat, now known as the "Adelaide," newly painted and adorned, and with the right to carry 300 more passengers than when it was the city's property.

Goes Into Commission as Excursion Steamer With Increased Capacity.

Completely transformed by spotless white paint, polished brass work and black smokestacks, the former municipal steamer, J. Putnam Bradlee, now the Adelaide, which was originally built at a cost of $63,810 and early last year sold by the city at public auction for $2,057, the price of junk, is being licensed with a permit to carry 700 passengers between Boston and Nahant. The transformed steamer goes into the excursion trade next Sunday.

The steamer was taken to New York last November, where the United States inspectors at that port gave her a certificate permitting her to carry 700 passengers. The Bradlee did municipal service in Boston Harbor for thirty years. The inspectors of both Boston and New York who have inspected her say that the boat is seaworthy.

Pronounce Her Seaworthy.

A certificate from the steamship inspectors is held to mean that the vessel is staunch and in every respect safe and fit for passengers. Last week the steamer was brought around to Boston, and the local inspectors indorsed her certificate. Their indorsement reads as follows:

Boston, Mass., June 25.

This steamer having been provided with 714 life preservers is authorized to navigate the route between Boston and Nahant, and to carry 700 passengers from June 25 until October 1. Also one additional pilot and one additional engineer.

(Signed) WILLIAM A. CARLETON,
ANDREW A. SAVAGE,
Local Inspectors.

So, with that permission of the United States authorities, this steamer, which was sold for one-twentieth of her cost, will commence Sunday to navigate between Boston and Nahant.

Inspectors William A. Carlton and A. A. Savage to-day made the following statement to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

Found Perfectly Sound.

"We can simply say that we inspected the Adelaide and found her to be perfectly safe and sound. She is certainly fitted for the work that her permit entitles her to do. In addition to this she was inspected most thoroughly when she was in New York. That inspection was made by the New York board, one member of which was for three years an inspector in this office. He knew the boat, knew her age and knew that she was formerly the J. Putnam Bradlee. The boat was hauled up on the marine railway and the inspectors spent three days aboard of her.

"It is charged that the boat in its palmiest days was only licensed to carry 400 passengers, and that now she is allowed to carry 700. In reply to this we would say that in every case applied for a permit to carry more than 400. If they had wished to carry 700 and were willing to fit her for that number we would have been willing to grant a permit for that number.

Good for Many More Years.

"It is also charged that the Adelaide has no water-tight compartments, as there should be. No vessel with a permit limited to the harbor limits is required to have these. The Adelaide's permit simply allowed her to carry passengers within the harbor limits.

"She was built in 1875. But age does not necessarily mean that a boat should be condemned. Look at the case of the old New Brunswick. She was forty-five years old when she was burned by her owners, but her hull was in the best of condition at that time. Why, one of the best boats of its kind in the harbor to-day, the Governor Andrew, was built a year before the Bradlee was.

J. Putnam Bradlee Pronounced Seaworthy by Inspectors of Two Ports.

REPEATED ENCORES FOR MRS. CAHOON

Mrs. Bertha Wells Cahoon was the principal attraction at the Eston Class concert at Roslindale last evening. Mrs. Cahoon read "The Last Word," by Van Dyke; "When the Honeymoon Wanes," by White, and a few selections of her own composition. Repeated encores were demanded by a delighted audience. Mrs. Cahoon was assisted by Miss Irene Sherman, contralto; Mr. Carlos Fifield, violinist, and Miss May E. Welch, pianist.

The entertainment was given in the parlors of the Roslindale Church, Ashland street, and was attended by a large gathering of society folk.

THRILLING STORY OF PACKINGTOWN! NOVEL THAT HAS STARTLED NATION!

THE JUNGLE—BY UPTON SINCLAIR

CHAPTER XVI.

WHEN Jurgis awoke again he went quietly enough. He was exhausted and half-stunned, and besides he saw the line uniforms of the policemen. He drove in a patrol wagon with half a dozen of them watching him; keeping as far away as possible, however, on account of the fertilizer.

Then he stood before the sergeant's desk and gave his name and address, and saw a charge of assault and battery entered against him. On his way to his cell a burly policeman turned him because he started down the wrong corridor, and then added a kick which he was not quite enough; nevertheless Jurgis did not even lift his eyes. He had lived two years and a half in Packingtown, and he knew what it pulling was.

It was as much as a man's very life was worth to argue; those to their bitterest hate. Like as not a dozen would pile on to him at once, and pound his face into a pulp.

It would be nothing unusual if he got his skull cracked in the melee—in which case they would report that he had been drunk and had fallen down, and there would be no one to know the difference or to care.

So a barred door clanged open Jurgis and he sat down upon a bench and buried his face in his hands. He was stone; he had the afternoon and all of the night to himself.

At first he was like a wild beast that has glutted itself; he was in a dull state of satisfaction. He had done up the scoundrel pretty well, not as well as he would have if they had given him a minute more, but pretty well, all the same, the ends of his fingers were still tingling from their contact with the fellow's throat.

But then, little by little, as his strength came back, and his senses cleared, he began to see beyond the momentary gratification; that he had nearly killed the boss would not help him—not the horrors that she had borne nor the memory that would haunt her all her days.

It would not help her to feed her and her child; she would certainly lose her place, while he—what was to happen to him God only knew.

Like Caged Beast

Half the night he paced the floor, wrestling with this nightmare; and when he was exhausted he lay down, trying to sleep, but failing instead, for the first time in his life, that his brain was too much for him. In the cell next to him was a drunken wife-beater and in the one beyond a yelling maniac.

At midnight they opened the station-house to the homeless wanderers who were crowded about the door, sifting in the Winter blast; and they thronged into the corridor outside of the cells. Some of them stretched themselves out on the bare stone floor and fell to snoring; others sat up, laughing and talking, cursing and quarreling.

The air was fetid with their breath, yet in spite of this some of them shuddered and called down the torments of hell upon him, while he lay in a far corner of his cell, counting the throbbings of the blood in his forehead.

They had brought him the supper, which was "stiffers and dose"—being hunks of dry bread on a tin plate, and coffee, called "dope" because it was drugged to keep the prisoners quiet.

Jurgis had not known this, or he would have swallowed the stuff in desperation; as it was, every nerve of him was a quiver with shame and fear. Toward morning the place fell silent, and he got up and began to pace his cell; and then within the soul of him there broke up a flood, red-eyed and ernel, and tore out the strings of his heart.

It was not for himself that he suffered—what did a man who worked in Durham's fertilizer mill care about anything that the world might do to him? What was any tyranny of prison compared with the tyranny of the past, of the thing that had happened and could not be recalled, of the memory that could never be effaced?

The horror of it drove him mad; he stretched out his arms to heaven, crying out for deliverance from it—and there was no deliverance, there was no power even in heaven that could undo the past.

If it was a ghost that would not down; it followed him, it seized upon him and beat him to the ground. Ah, if only he could have foreseen it—but then, he would have foreseen it if he had not been a fool. He smote his hands upon his forehead, cursing himself because he had ever allowed this to work where he had, because he had not stood between her and a fate which everyone knew to be so common.

He should have taken her away, even if it were to lie down and die of starvation in the gutters of Chicago's streets. And now—oh, it could not be time; it was too monstrous, too horrible.

Shame and Rage

It was a thing that could not be faced; a new shuddering seized him every time he tried to think of it. No, there was no bearing the load of it; there was no living under it.

There would be none for her—he knew that he might pardon her, might plead with her on his knees, but she would never look him in the face again, she would never be his wife again. The shame of it would kill her—there could be no other deliverance, and it was best that she should die.

This was simple and clear, and yet, with cruel inconsistency, whenever he escaped from this nightmare it was to suffer and cry out at the vision of Ona starving. They had put him in jail, and they would keep him here a long time, years maybe.

And Ona would surely not go to work again, broken and crushed as she was. And Elzbieta and Martin, too, might lose their places—if that hell-fiend Connor chose to set to work to ruin them, they would all be turned out. And even if he did not, they could not live—even if the boys left school again, they could surely not pay all the bills without him and Ona.

They had only a few dollars now—they had just paid the rent of the house a week ago, and that after it was two weeks overdue. So it would be due again in a week?

They would have no money to pay it then—and they would lose the house, after all their long, heart-breaking struggle.

Three times now the agent had warned him that he would not tolerate another delay. Perhaps it was very base of Jurgis to be thinking about the house when he had the other unspeakable thing to fill his mind; yet, how much he had suffered for this house; how much they had all of them suffered!

It was their one hope of respite, as long as they lived; they had put all their money into it—and they were working people, poor people, whose money was their strength, the very substance of them; body and soul; the thing by which they lived and for lack of which they died.

To Live or Die?

And they would lose it all; they would be turned out into the streets and have to hide in some icy garret, and live or die as best they could? Jurgis had all the night and all of many more nights to think about this, and he saw the thing in its details; he lived it all, as if he were there.

They would sell their furniture, and then run into debt at the stores, and then be refused credit; they would borrow a little from the Scotchtown, whose deficiency stove was cottering on the brink of ruin; the neighbors would come and help them a little—poor, sick Jadvyga would bring a few spare pennies, as she always did when people were starving, and Tamosiuus Kuszleika would bring them the proceeds of a night's fiddling.

So they would struggle to hang on until he got out of jail—or would they know that he was in jail, would they be able to find out anything about him? Would they be allowed to see him—was it to be part of his punishment to be kept in ignorance of their fate?

His mind would hang upon the worst possibilities; he saw Ona ill and tortured, Marija out of her place, little Stanislovas unable to get to work for the snow, the whole family turned out on the street.

God Almighty! would they actually let them be down in the street and die? Would there be no help even then—would they wander about in the snow till they froze?

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Bribed to Swear Babe Is Another's, Mother Says

Solomon's Ruse at Trial of Bertha Tracey Reveals Perjury; Girl Held.

SOMERSWORTH, N. H., June 28.—Bribed with $5 to say that her living child was that of Bertha Tracey, who is accused of killing her baby, a woman to-day perjured herself at the trial and then, when the court suggested that the child be sent away from its supposed mother, she could not stand the strain, and, the mother-love asserting itself, confessed to her part in the deception. It was a modern application of King Solomon's solution of the problem of the two women who claimed a child, and it was very effective.

Miss Tracey was charged with having made away with her baby, born Palm Sunday. She has said that the child was boarding in South Berwick, Me., with a woman named Mills, and the police gave her thirty days in which to produce the infant. The time was up yesterday. A woman entered the court room bearing a baby. She swore that the baby was Miss Tracey's, and stuck to her story. Finally a suggestion was made that the child be taken by the court and placed in an institution. Instantly the witness's manner changed. She became frightened, then indignant.

"No, no," she finally cried. "I will not let you take my child from me!"

"But it is not your child. You have sworn it belongs to Miss Tracey," protested the County Attorney.

The woman screamed and fainted. Upon being restored to consciousness she confessed that she had been paid $5 to bring her child to court and say it was Miss Tracey's. She had never thought there might be an attempt to take it away from her.

A warrant was prepared, charging Miss Tracey with murdering her child. She pleaded not guilty and Attorney William T. Russell was appointed by the court to defend her. Judge Wells found her probably guilty and held her for the September term of the Superior Court, without bail. She was taken away screaming, "Oh, papa, papa!"

BERTHA TRACEY.

WANTED JOB TO TEACH JOHN D.

Special Cable to Boston American.

COMPIEGNE, France, June 28.—John D. Rockefeller has just had his second experience with a crank since he has been in France. Some one in the employ of Rockefeller's chateau to try to persuade the billionaire to be taught French.

"Can I have a few minutes talk with you please," said the crank.

Mr. Rockefeller became alarmed, said he was here to rest and exercised himself, but the crank persisted.

"I don't want you to give me anything," said the Englishman.

"I want to give you something. I want to teach you French in nine days, and then you will be able to speak the language in two weeks."

Mr. Rockefeller seemed to be much relieved and said: "I am sorry, very sorry but really haven't time. Besides I manage to get along very well with English. Everybody seems to speak it. Good day."

PROHIBITION WINS IN MAINE

PORTLAND, Me., June 28.—Maine Republicans will enter the State campaign with the prohibition plank of their platform intact, according to the action of the convention yesterday to eliminate the anti-liquor declaration from the report of William T. Cobb of Rockland, nominated for a second term, if re-elected, will be as a temperance candidate.

HARVARD BATTLES WITH YALE CREWS TO-DAY

HARVARD VARSITY EIGHT, WHICH MANY PICK TO TRIUMPH OVER THE YALE CREW TO-DAY

Crimson, despite Blue's reported fast time last week, is still a slight favorite in big varsity eight-oared race in New London regatta to-day—Coach Kennedy believes Yale will win feature competition. Big crowd on hand to see water sport.

NEW LONDON, Ct., June 28.—Bright and fair broke the day for the annual Harvard-Yale regatta, and the 20,000 people who have swarmed here to line the old Thames course and cheer the crews to victory predicted a fine day's sport.

It was an ideal day for shell racing. There was a light breeze coming out of the north in ewphuls this morning, but not sufficient in strength to disturb the surface of the Thames River, which lay placid and shimmering in the morning sun while long like a great copper globe in the sky.

Weather and water conditions were just what the crews had been praying for.

Keen, and on edge for the contests, the crews got up early this morning and began awaiting the signal from the coaches to push their sleek eight-oared shells into the varsity eights took the early morning hours more calmly, as their race was not scheduled until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Crews in Good Shape.

Individual inspection of crew members, both at Gale's ferry and at the float, showed each member in excellent physical condition. There can be no claims of lack of condition this year. Especially is this true of Harvard. The Crimson boys have never shown such race physical form as this year, and it has given Harvard's adherents much cause for hope. With both Yale and Harvard in the best possible condition, superiority in watermanship and true courage in a driving race will tell the story at the finish line.

Kennedy, coach for Yale, spoke concervatively of the crew's chances, and said: "It's an even money proposition who will win. I think it will be a close contest and the winner will only have a small margin. Yale has a good crew. The time made in trials, while not remarkably fast, does not indicate everything, for conditions may be different in the race to-day. It does show that we have a very good team, for has Harvard, and there you are. The race will be worth watching."

Praised Jim Wray.

The Harvard crew members at Red Top this morning had nothing but praise for Jim Wray, their coach, who, they said, had brought them to a fine state of physical and rowing condition.

Wray, like Kennedy, was not given to claiming the race for his crew. When asked what Harvard's chances were just before the freshman and varsity four crews pulled on board the launch for Harvard to start for the first race, Wray said: "Harvard has a better crew than last year's crew. It means that Yale will have to row her utmost to win. How she does it, which, of course, I greatly doubt. Harvard is in perfect physical condition, and if they win a large part of the credit will be theirs, for they have the ability, the stamina and the courage. No coach can ask more than that."

New London was abroad early to-day. The excursion trains from Boston, New Haven and from cities and towns near by began to arrive early, as the first race was scheduled at 10 o'clock. Many spectators came on later trains and made no effort to witness the freshman eight and varsity four races of two miles each. The late comers came to see the big event, which was not scheduled until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. All day long steamers, trains, packed to the platforms, brought great crowds of collegians and their admirers. The Crocker House was made the centre of activities and graduates and undergraduates with rolls of money bet their money like sailors on their crews.

The bookmakers quoted the betting on the big race at evens this morning, while Harvard had a slight call in the betting on the freshman eight race. There was plenty of Harvard money in circulation, but as the Yale admirers did not get here in big numbers until later there was some Harvard money uncovered.

The interest in the regatta was noticeably increased over previous years. Stores and residences were decorated in crimson and purple, while here and there were splashes of college colors. Pretty girls carrying college flags paraded State street before the observation trains left for the first race, while the city was filled with graduates, undergraduates and others. Seats on the observation cars for the race were sold at a premium and spectators reaped a harvest.

Gay Scenes on Course.

Along the racing lanes were scores of steam yachts and sailing craft from many eastern yacht clubs. Early this morning the course was cleared of the unwarranted and under the direction of the revenue cutters anchored about. There was room enough from the lines not to interfere with the shells. Besides cutters, numerous additional code flags were flung from the vessels, while some yachts were hoisted large purple and crimson flags from the signal halyards in honor of the large crowd that achored along the course were the Noma Star, Narada, Lelia, Rosanda, Venetia, Sir Lancelot and Norman. Two revenue cutters with a fleet of small launches policed the course to keep it clear.

How the varsity crews will row to-day is shown below:

The first of the Harvard-Yale boat races were rowed here yesterday, and honors were evenly divided.

The mile race for freshman four-oared crews was won by Yale by an inch. The Harvard freshmen were about half a length behind.

The half-mile race for graduate eights was won by Harvard by a little more than a length. The time was not taken officially, but it was about 2:36.

The races were rowed late in the afternoon. There were only spectators were on the Harvard and Yale launches, which were crowded with members of the other crews. A few other small boats also followed the race.

Mr. Richards, who will referee the more important races to-day, was referee. The start of the freshman crews at the half-mile flag and the finish at the one and one-half mile flag. The varsity eights started at a very high stroke and in a short time settled down to a rapid, but not a fast, record stroke, could not keep up the stroke and at the half-mile Yale went ahead and finished half a length to the good.

The race for graduate eights was rowed immediately after the freshman race. The start was at the half-mile flag, and the finish at the mile. The Harvard men started off in a spirit, which they kept up to the close. The Yale men rowed a much slower stroke, and gradually dropped behind. At the finish there was open water between the boats.

The Yale men were pretty well used up after the race, but the Harvard graduates, who on the average were much younger than their Yale rivals, rowed jauntily back to their float and immediately went in swimming.

Afterward they found a few wanting encampment, which they had of course on the John Harvard. Then they went up to the Yale quarters and filled the map which "Andy" Graves had given as a prize for the race. The Harvard and Yale men got jolly time for a few minutes, and then the Cambridge graduates went back, followed by the loud cheers of their former antagonists.

It's no easy jaunt for the giants when they line up with the Tennerites, as they found out yesterday, and when they start on the second canter this afternoon there will be some tall rustling by McGraw's men if they expect to room.

Gus Dorner is just about in proper shape to hand the "Dutch" a subway wallop, and he ought to have it on "Dummy" Tay for if McGraw sends the silent pitcher to the middle space.

The Giants are not quite so noisy as on their last trip this way. Being minus Donlin, it makes a big difference when it comes to gingering up.

It was the big scare the Giants got in the first game, but they got away with it by the score of 6 to 4.

The game abounded in lively stunts and fine fielding features and kept the fans constantly on the jump applauding the set pieces.

Mathewson pitched his first game here this season and was in his old time form, and was never in danger outside of the fifth. He allowed but five hits.

ATHLETES OFF FOR ENGLAND

NEW YORK, June 28.—Among the passengers who sailed on the Teutonic yesterday was J. P. Dugerman, a theological student of Princeton University, who will represent the New York A. C. in the English athletic championships on July 7. He will try for the broad jump and 120-yard hurdles. Hegerman had as a companion R. W. Waggley, a former English champion on a mate in the jumps Hagerman will have L. T. Sheffield of Yale, who will also wear the colors of the New York A. C.

NEW YORK, June 28.—If the Pilgrims continue to lose any more games by that margin of one run their aspirations for the "pail bail" championship will get them the trophy. The team can't be accused of quitting whatever else happens, though it does seem to have a great faculty for dropping behind towards the end of play.

Harris is to tackle the Highlanders this afternoon. Against him the mighty Chesbro will do his best, incidentally using that famous spit ball. The inning aggregation will find it necessary to make more hits than their opponents in order to win. They have been hitting well of late, considering favorable with their rivals, but the old exchange haven't ordinary luck. The Highlanders just when it is necessary and to cluster the smash once in a while, too. Frank Laporte is a good ex ample of the unfortunate. Laporte can single as he attacked a cluster of four singles to his average. Two runs resulted thereby hitting. In the eighth New York stepped ahead, and as a failure Boston planted two tourists on second and third, but the team stood on behind All third with none out in the ninth. There Orth and made dubbons place turn to sun they stayed. Winter pitched fairly well since by solid team work. As Boston only suffice in the game, but showed down

M'DONALD FOR SPRINGFIELD

NEWARK, N. J., June 28.—Captain Manager Hugh Jennings of the Baltimore Eastern League baseball team believes that the negotiations for the release of Shortstop McDonald of the Baltimore team to the Springfield, Mass., team, would likely be successful. He said that he was most willing to release him, as he thought McDonald's place and as soon as he was found McDonald would be released. The deal may be consummated within three or four days.

FRANCE WON AUTO RACE

LE MANS, France, June 28.—Sisz, France, Nazarro, Italy, and Clement, France, was the finishing order of the automobile contest over the Sarthe circuit for the Grand Prix. The distance, 1,236 kilometers was finished yesterday in twelve hours, three minutes and fifty-seven seconds, an average of three miles. Sisz held the lead throughout the second day's racing and completed the whole distance at an average speed of 103 kilometers per hour.

SALEM RUNNING MEET TO HAVE OPENING TO-DAY

Special to the Boston American.

SALEM, N. H., June 28.—This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the first race for running horses will be contested at Rockingham Park. A monster crowd will be on hand. Race fans from Boston, New York and Newport are already in town, and when the starter gives the signal for the opener this afternoon one of the largest crowds that ever attended a meeting of its kind in New England is expected to be present.

There will be the usual flag raising and other customary inaugural ceremonies before the horses are sent to the post. A band will furnish music.

The prospects for some exciting racing to-day are very bright, as the weather is clear, the track fast and the entries unusually good. Six races are on the card, including the New England handicap for three-year-olds and upwards, with a purse of $5,000. The Green Mountain steeplechase, which was announced, will be replaced by another race, as the steeplechase course is not yet in fit condition.

The entries and weights to-day:

First race, one mile, selling—Dan Cupid, selling, Chauncey 98, Alpin 95, Sunrise 98, Rainbow 92, Bucks on Harry Jones 98, Royal Lad 91, Hilston Boy 94.

Second race, one mile, selling—Marina Cates 95, Arcine 96, Little Wonder 101, Neptune 99, Wood Nymph 96, Fair Play 96.

DOROTHY DIX LAYS DOWN RULES FOR THE ENGAGED

Be Careful Not to Make Yourself Ridiculous

By Dorothy Dix

THE sound of the breaking and mending of matrimonial engagements may be heard from one end of the land to the other.

The breach of promise suit, once the perquisite of the fair sex, has been also appropriated by man, and you can scarcely pick up a newspaper without reading the sad, sad story of some tender maiden who asks a monetary balm for her broken heart, or of some unfeeling youth who demands cold, hard cash from the fickle lady who has trifled with his tender affections.

Why should this be thus? Why should love's young dream explode like an overcharged gas balloon? There can be but one answer.

The young people of this day do not know how to keep the love they have won. They do not understand the ethics of the engagement.

No one who has been through the experience will deny that a betrothal is a trying situation. Both parties to it are on probation, and they look at each other with critical eye.

There is still time to withdraw without alimony or scandal if either one finds that the other one does not come up to his or her ideal, and so to properly conduct an engagement requires really more finesse and diplomacy and hard horse sense than it does to be happy though married.

Many Disillusioned

FOR in matrimony most people are guided by the lonely old adage that advises us to make the best of a bad bargain, while in the engagement no such rule obtains.

"Thank Heaven we are NOT married," cry the disillusioned betrothed couple as they smash the engagement ring into smithereens and demand back their love letters.

Still the broken engagement is an unpleasant thing to have around the house. Moreover, somebody in it is mighty liable to get hurt. It is also wounding to our vanity to think that we have shed our halo in another's eyes, and so the assertion of how to carry an engagement to a successful culmination at the altar is not without interest and importance.

The first piece of advice that anybody can give to either the engaged man or woman is to avoid making themselves ridiculous.

When we think of love being done to death we picture some tragic happening, but in reality love is laughed to death oftener than it is slain by any other way. A woman may know a man for a villain and love him still, but it is all over with her the minute she sees that he is making a fool of himself.

A man may perceive that a girl has serious defects of character, and his infatuation remain unabated, but let him see her in once as a figure and his affair is complete and instantaneous.

This suggests the obvious fact—but always a fact to be considered by the people in love should study their own personalities, draw up a code of laws to meet in accordance with the physical peculiarities with which Heaven has blessed them.

Romantic Fat Men

FOR instance, it is a machinist of the question for a fat man and a thin man to make love in the same way as it is for them to wear each other's clothes.

Nature may have given the man who weighs 250 pounds as romantic a heart as ever beat within the breast of any sylphing, but if he takes the same methods of expressing his affection he is more likely to arouse a maiden's risibilities than to appeal to her fancy.

If Romeo had been a stout gentleman, built with lazy window effects, climbing up a ladder that creaked and groaned under his weight, Juliet would never have risked her life and her reputation hanging over the balcony to give him a helping hand to be reached up by.

She would have gone inside to giggle at the spectacle he presented. Yet it was all right for Romeo, because he was of immovable purposes, of confident mien built for climbing, and it's all wrong for the heavyset young man, because he isn't framed up that way.

Therefore the fat man who wishes to appear a romantic figure in his lady love's sloth play acting.

As long as the fat man keeps his feet firmly planted on the solid ground and solid love-making he is all right. It is only when he essays the aerial ballet in sentiment and conduct that he goes to pieces, romantically speaking.

It is when his collar wilts and he gazes so longingly that his inner being begins to ask herself if she is really in love with him, or has mistaken a passing fancy for a permanent affection.

Many a man might have avoided having his ring sent back to him if he had only taken more care of his collar.

Love and the Collar

NEITHER can a rotund and well-fed looking gentleman win out by adopting a melancholy and pining-away attitude before an obdurate fair one. He limn, or has mistaken a passing fancy for a permanent affection.

Many a man might have avoided having his ring sent back to him if he had only taken more care of his collar.

He does not look the part, and when he tells a woman that he cannot eat or sleep for love of her she can only laugh and reply that a little tanning will do him good. To move a woman to marry him through sympathy a man has to be born with a lean and hungry look.

These are some of the things that the fat man who is engaged should avoid doing, but it is not to say that he is not a most effective love maker when he sticks to the things that he can do.

His role should be one of quiet dignity, and the spectacle he presented. Yet it was all right for Romeo because he was of immovable purposes, of confident mien and slim man look like a mere monkey trick and the poetry-quoting and ballad-warbling of the sunset-eyed chap appear fluent and graceful.

Imagine a Fat Man Climbing Up to Juliet's Balcony

NEW ELBOW SLEEVE WRINKLES

HERE'S a new wrinkle for the ladies. It's nothing more complicated than a woman with the elbow sleeves of her evening gown wrinkled sleevelets coming right down to the wrist, and a short glove coming right up to meet every woman who makes even up to the wrist.

The feebleness about the final wrinkle enable dressing up to now the woman of the long wristed or sleeve. Besides the with the nonsparkle gloves has been inconvenience in removing the glove which wrecking gratings and hand rest was this style affords. It also assures a great wrinkle beyond the usual "Bedish Hill."

Later the carnage shifted what proved to be a drifting, abandoned vessel, much damaged in the storm. It was feared that the Beulah Hill, ten days out, had collided in the darkness with this derelict and sank instantly.

There was a little excited murmur of voices around Haggard.

In dead calm an ocean steamer, well built, is strongly tied, thus enabling her stress of wind and wave, failing a victim in one of those unheralded storms. It was one of those ironies of maritime ten days almost in a moment the sea had swallowed the victims up.

But Haggard did not see the gloomy faces about him, or hear the excited talk. He was hurrying out in his mind all that this meant for him.

Then his eye fell on Grieve. Grieve was standing with his head bowed, staring at the notice. So this was why Grieve had shut off on the same several as himself.

With a sudden exultant gleam in his face Haggard swapped his fingers in Grieve's direction.

Pushing his way through the little knot, he put his hand suddenly on the man's shoulder. Grieve looked up with a start. His face was very pale.

"Grieve's serious confirmed, Grieve," said Haggard. "By the way, that packet you spoke of is it worth the paper it's written on now, I wonder?"

CHAPTER LIX.

One Survivor

PHILIP HAGGARD walked up to the door of the Wynters' house. The blinds were all down. He knew that the tragic news had reached there already.

In reply to his question the servant said that Miss Wynter had given instructions that she could see no callers, but would be like to see Mrs. Grey?

Haggard was shown into the drawing room. An absolute stillness seemed to reign in the house. The servants seemed to tread more softly than usual, and the maid who admitted Haggard had spoken in a lowered voice, as though the dead man himself lay under the roof. At last Mrs. Grey came in. Her eyes were red and swollen. Her lips trembled in the effort to speak.

"Forgive my intrusion at so painful a time, Mrs. Grey," said Haggard, in a tone of sympathetic voice, "but hearing the terrible news, I felt I must come at once to express my deep sympathy to you and Miss Wynter. I could not survive a thing I can scarcely trust myself to speak of it."

"Terrible," echoed Mrs. Grey, faltering ly, "only a thousand miles from home and father and daughter were in each other. This awful, unexpected blow seems to have stunned her. I tell her that even yet there may be hope, but I'm afraid she pays no room for it.

"Very little, I am afraid," said Haggard. "The latest news seems to prove beyond doubt that the steamer which appears to have been run down in the darkness by the drifting derelict was the Beulah Hill, in which my friend Grieve was making his way home. I can hardly realize it. It is so terrible."

Mrs. Grey's face was turned away. Her hand had broken out anew beyond her power of control.

A Complete Victory

"I won't intrude upon you any longer at such a sad time, Mrs. Grey. Please convey my deepest sympathy to Miss Wynter," said Haggard. He added: "Of course, our mutual friend, John Herries, will have heard of the sad news and called to leave his condolences?"

"No," said Mrs. Grey. "I believe he is away from home."

"Of course," Haggard said quickly. "In that case he could only telegraph, of course."

Though he spoke with studied carelessness, his words were really a question.

"No, he has not sent any telegram as yet," Mrs. Grey answered abstractedly.

"Then he was first in the field. Haggard felt a sense of satisfaction.

You will convey to Miss Wynter the assurance of my sincere sympathy," said Haggard, as he took his leave.

He did not send a telegram.

Other girls less attractive married, but these three pretty girls, though apparently great belles, remained single.

I asked a young man friend what the cause of it was, and he said that all the men were afraid to marry any of them, because they were so notoriously untidy.

"They are pretty and jolly," he said, "but they are untidy personally, and the house is abominably untidy. I do not believe the window curtains have been washed in years, and there are dust and dirt in every corner. No man would care to trust his future to such shiftless extravagance and discomfort."

Neatness Is the Charm Men Most Admire in Women

By Beatrice Fairfax

A YOUNG man has written asking my advice as to the wisdom of breaking his engagement.

He says that he loves his fiancée very much, but that she is so slovenly and untidy that he fears he could never live happily with her. He has spoken to her time and again about this serious fault, but with no good result.

I cannot advise him to marry her, for I know that no girl who is untidy about her person and the house could make a good wife. She could not make a man comfortable, and no man's love is proof against discomfort.

Untidiness also means extravagance, and an extravagant wife is a drawback to any man.

This young man differs in nowise from his fellow men. There is no man living who does not dislike slovenliness and untidiness in a woman.

No matter how pretty a girl may be, if she is untidy it seriously detracts from her beauty.

The plain girl, of course, can still less afford to be untidy, but she need have no qualms about being pleasant to look upon if she keeps herself exquisitely neat and dainty, for neatness and daintiness have a beauty all their own.

Many a man's interest in a girl has been checked because he found her to be untidy about her home.

In a town where I used to visit there lived a family of charming girls. They were pretty and bright, and were always surrounded by young men. But they did not seem so anxious to marry.

Other girls less attractive married, but these three pretty girls, though apparently great belles, remained single.

I asked a young man friend what the cause of it was, and he said that all the men were afraid to marry any of them, because they were so notoriously untidy.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

NEED NOT WRITE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man about to be married; have been engaged ten months. Now, my fiancée has been corresponding with another young man and having him call on her during our courting and engagement. She addresses him as "Dear Harry," and he addresses her as "Dear Mary." I have told her it is not proper for her to write to him and receive his letters, and she said if she didn't answer his letters and told him to stay away she would be hurting his family, as they are old friends of her family. Is she doing what is proper?

WORRIED.

AS she is engaged to you and you object to the correspondence she should give it up. There is no necessity for an engaged girl to correspond with any man but her fiance. I am sure that the young man's family would not expect her to write to him if you objected. She can tell the man that she does not care to have her correspond with any man and she should not think your request unreasonable.

NOT ENOUGH LOVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About six months ago I met a young girl of not quite eighteen years old. At the time she professed to be engaged to a very worthy young man about town, whose name I cannot mention. After meeting her several times she claimed she loved me so much that she had broken her engagement.

I am only twenty-four years old, and making a very small salary, which I can just about live on, and can hardly think of getting married. I think a great deal of this girl, and in fact, love her very much, and I do not feel regret in taking her away from her flame. She says she loves me so much that she will give up her present society and is willing to work if I will marry her. I tell her that is absurd foolish, but she only cries and says I have enough for us both. My salary is $25 per week.

I THINK you could marry on your salary if you were very much in love, but you hardly seem that. The girl is young, and will get over her infatuation for you. Do not ask her to marry you unless you really mean her. A great many men marry on a much smaller salary than you are earning. Perhaps, however, you are extravagant, and spend all you make.

NOT A GREAT DIFFERENCE

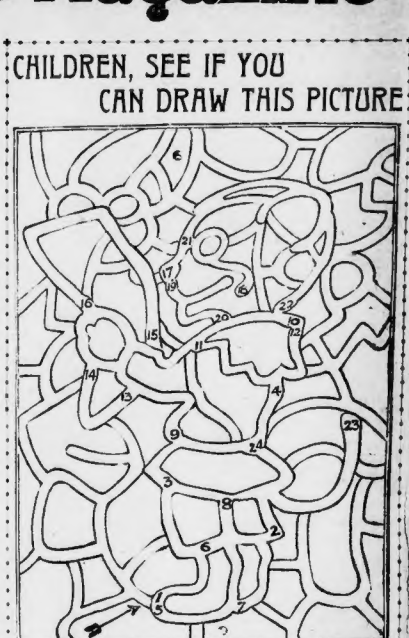
DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Do you think it advisable for a man of twenty-three to marry a lady of thirty-one? We, I believe, love each other very much. Having only been in this country for a short time, I am not in a position to procure a position which would enable me to marry, but as I am strong and energetic, with a fair knowledge of my profession, I am looking forward to succeeding.

LONGING.

OF course it would be better if you were nearer of an age, but if you are sure of each other's love I do not see any reason why you should not be happy. Do not worry until you have secured a permanent position.

CHILDREN, SEE IF YOU CAN DRAW THIS PICTURE.



HERE is some fun for the children. There is no prize offered, but every little boy and girl should try and see how easy it is to get a nice picture by simply following the directions. Take a pencil and begin at the figure 1 where the arrow points, and mark to figure 2, and then to 3, and so on right up to 25. Take care not to cross any of the black lines with your pencil and see what you will have when you get through.

How to Get Rid of Beauty Blemishes

WOMAN'S first ambition is to get rid of wrinkles blemishes her beauty. This is quite laudable, since the woman's duty is to be as attractive as possible.

When a woman notices that the skin is beginning to pucker and her chin and neck to lose their youthful roundness and symmetry, then she should lose no time in trying to eradicate the unsightly condition. Above all, she should begin at once. She should prevent the accumulation of the double chin or the shrunken neck, and she must remember the fact that if she has not prevented the blemishes, she should remove them.

For the double chin there is an admirable method which will not only do away with but will tighten up the skin, leaving it smooth and symmetrical.

Water should be first dashed on the face, very hot, and then very cold, with massage cream; then place the hands flat against the neck and chin. Allow the fingers to meet beneath the chin. Draw them back with side with a firm pressure until they reach the ears. Do this not once, but many times. When this operation is over dress about a quarter of a teaspoonful of the juice of lemon in a pint or quart of water and dash it over the neck and chin. This tones up the sagging muscles and renders them firm.

Next to the chin the deep lines on either side of the mouth, extending from the nostrils to the corner of the mouth, denote more markedly than any other the marks of years. This is ruinous to the beauty of profile and destroys the attractiveness of the mouth entirely.

For this the hands should be applied to the face, with the fingers of the lower part of the hand resting on the bones of the jaw. Place the finger over the chin, and then use the first and second fingers in a rotary fashion about the mouth. Also with a firm pressure place the fingers of each hand on the lines and move outward and upward toward the ears.

Wrinkles in the brow can be eradicated by placing the thumbs at the roots of the hair and bringing them down to the eyebrows, using considerable pressure in the downward strokes. When the forehead is wrinkled it is futile to correct from above. Lines under the eyes generally come from fatigue or age, and while they are what are called character lines, still they detract from the beauty of the face.

In treating from the greatest care should be exercised for the reason that more harm than good will result if harsh measures are used.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

"THE steamship Carnac, just arrived, reported having sighted some distance away the lights of a large steamer two days ago. The night was pitch dark. Before the Carnac could speak the other vessel her lights were seen to disappear as though a curtain had descended. The Carnac stood by until daybreak, dawn revealed no trace of the steamer, but the Carnac passed through floating wreckage, gratings and hen coops, on which was painted the name "Beulah Hill."

Later the carnage shifted what proved to be a drifting, abandoned vessel, much damaged in the storm. It was feared that the Beulah Hill, ten days out, had collided in the darkness with this derelict and sank instantly.

Mr. Grieve Again

Robert Wynter out of the way at last. How strange it seemed that his partner, whose he had left as he believed dead less than a week ago behind the locked door of the house should have escaped so inexplicably and come to this tragic end a few days later. In his thoughts it was a moment as though the man had died twice.

But he could not come to life again now.

He reached his home about 7 o'clock that evening. As he let himself in by his latchkey, the manservant, West, met him.

"Mr. Grieve has called, sir, and is waiting for you."

West's tone was most respectful as he spoke of Grieve. He had heard of Grieve's promotion and difference from the time in which he had announced the man's visit last night: "The clerk Grieve, sir, says he would like to see you."

The thought crossed Haggard's mind that Grieve had enjoyed his rest as man ager for a very short time. His fall would be as rapid as his rise. Why had the man come now? Well, he knew how to deal with him. His mouth closed like a steel trap.

"Where is he?"

"In the drawing room, sir."

Haggard went straight to the room and dung open the door. Grieve rose as he did so.

"Well," said Haggard, in his most tyrannous tone, deliberately rude to the man who had ceased to be "sir," "what do you want?"

"I don't know whether you have seen the last edition of the paper," said Grieve. "If you have, you probably guess why your partner has come to see you."

"I object to the term partner. What do you refer to in the paper? I have not seen the latest edition. But he was consciousness of a vague feeling of alarm. "I suppose you mean that the news of the loss of the ship is still further confirmed?"

Another Possibility

"Yes," said Grieve, deliberately, "but there's something else. By the way, may you asked me how much I thought that packet insured to me by Robert Wynter was worth if the man who wrote the confirmation it could have been dead. I received my opinion upon the point; yours obviously was that Wynter's supposed death rendered it valueless. In other words, you thought you had nothing further to fear from me?"

Haggard was growing uneasy.

"If so, what was all this a prelude? What had Grieve seen in the paper that had suddenly re-established his shaking confidence in the power he held over his former employer?

"What are you driving at?" he said.

"This: The Beulah Hill has foundered, doubtless. There is one person who was saved in the Beulah Hill who did not lose his life in that disaster. There is one survivor," said Grieve very deliberately.

Haggard stared at the speaker.

"You mean are you joking, Grieve, or trying to put a trick on me?" he cried. He was quite colorless; a hundred fears swelled him. "Do you mean that Robert Wynter did not go down in the Beulah Hill? That he escaped?"

Haggard seized the newspaper from the other's hands and hunted feverishly for the news. He found it as last in a paragraph headed:

"One survivor from the ill-fated Beulah Hill."

But for a moment his agitation was so great that the print grew blurred before his eyes and the lines run into one another. One survivor from the lost ship!

Had Robert Wynter escaped death a second time?

TO BE CONTINUED.

THOUGHTS WORTH WHILE

A LOVING heart will make a thoughtful head.

To be a good talker one must first learn how to be a good listener.

Success is utter failure if achieved by the sacrifice of moral principle.

What we get from the world depends upon what we give to it. The most unprofitable thing to hold in this world is a grudge.

He who wishes to be happier than others must first consider others. Let your means overrun your wants, not your wants overrun your means.

Good companionship does not depend upon accident, but upon selection.

Every duty which is bidden to wait returns with seven fresh duties at its back.

It's more useful not to know things and make people think you do, than to know them and not have anybody believe it.

BETTER THAN MAY WINE

A PPLEADE is a refreshing drink. Peel and quarter a tart apple and boil it in enough water to cover it well. When tender press the apple to a pulp, let it cool, sweeten slightly, then strain into a glass containing a liberal supply of cracked ice.

Late in Spring apples are apt to be tasteless. Therefore, when preparing this drink in the Spring it is better to add the juice of half a lemon to every apple.

ASLEEP IN A COFFIN, CABBIE DIES IN FIRE

One Dead and Many Overcome by Smoke in North End Stable Blaze.

Asleep in a coffin, Jerry Hayes, the oldest cab driver in Boston, was burned to death in a fire in the four-story stable of Spillers & Co., at No. 230 and 232 Hanover street shortly after midnight.

The top floor of the building was utilized as a store room for undertaker's supplies and caskets and Hayes had been in the habit of making his bed in one of the coffins.

Firemen at 4 o'clock today found his body sprawled over a casket and, though awakened by the fire he had tried to escape, but was overcome before he could rise to his feet.

More than 160 horses were in the building at the time and were led to safety. All persons were overcome by smoke and several were rescued from neighboring tenements. There was much excitement. Ladderman Lee had a narrow escape from death by the slipping of a ladder. Rebecca Silverstein and Mary Harrington, residing in tenements on Parmenter street, were overcome and were carried down the smoke-filled stairways.

John Harrington, Mr. and Mrs. John McPhail and their nine-months-old baby, and Mary Madigan, living in the apartment house also, narrowly escaped death in the flames. Had it not been for the heroism of Miss Jennie Bennett of No. 182 Salem street, who broke in with her hose and cut a pane of glass in the street front of the house, and thus effected an entrance, when she saw the flames, a half dozen fatalities would undoubtedly have been recorded.

WAS QUARREL BETWEEN RUBY AND STAFFORD

Woman Who Knew Chauffeur Shot by Butler Tells of Ill-Feeling.

That there was bitter feeling between Reginald Stafford, the dead chauffeur of the wealthy Mrs. Eben Sumner of Hill Crest, North Andover, and Ward Ruby, the butler who killed him late last night, is borne out by statements Mrs. May Robert McPhee of No. 8 Jewett Park, Mrs. McPhee was employed by the Sumner mansion up to last Fall, and frequently met both men.

Mrs. McPhee says that a business trouble existed between Ruby and Stafford. When she saw the latter few weeks ago, he said laughingly, during conversation, "Ruby and I are one."

Mrs. McPhee does not owe that Stafford entered the house for purposes of robbery, as Ruby claims, and she says that he was well liked here, both among the employes.

Mrs. Sutton was affectionate woman naturally. She drew it upon every hand. When one of Help rendered any unusual service she would to make a present, and they called her in a way "their own," said she.

"If he and Mrs. Ron intended to marry he made no affair. I suppose they had a right to they wished. But as I have said, theirs to show no special attention to or other last year and neither did I many strained relations in the family as either relatives or employes, beyond fact that the butler usually made fortunes and possibly did not like scuf the help."

KNIGHTS GET RELEASE OF IRISH "PUCK"

Goat from Native Heath Will Be on Hand for Field Day July 4.

The "puck," or Irish goat of the gedelfish persuasion, who has been detained in quarantine on the Leyland line dock, has been released today.

An unterrified committee from the Knights of St. Patrick, to which der the goat is consigned, made goodly with friends this morning and started forthe quarantine purpurled to accept the goat.

"It's no light task, taking charge of he goat, Tim, is a genuine Kerry puck, fully independent liberty and a naturallyus jealous disposition. He's been a long time in the long detention and thum pleasant allegations concerning his character, the puck is now ready to be on state.

The release of the puck was accompanied only after a strenuous time between the St. Brendans and the immigration authorities. The law says that imported animals must be kept in quarantine a certain agth of time to rid them of any sources dontagion.

This meant that the puck would a be held for a few days in the St. Brendan field day at Harbor View Pan Lo road street, on July 4.

The Knights appealed to Commissioner Stillings "Let's the law," was his reply. Then Colonel Roger Scannell and J. Beegen and other St. Brendanite prerached to Secretary Wilson of the Partment of Agriculture, representing how necessary it was to get the pack there early. Secretary Wilson telegraphed back that if the local examiner was fixing, he had no personal objection to living the puck released.

JOHN L.'S OLD PAL, JERE DUNN, DIES OF CANCER

Three-Time Man-Killer, Gambler and All-Round Sport, Passes On.

Jere Dunn, husband of a Cambridge girl, friend of John L. Sullivan, all-round sport, gambler and three times a man-killer, is dead at his home in Passaic, N. J. He died in his bed from a short trouble. His friends had always said he would die with his "boots on," but Dunn had declared he would not.

Dunn's wife was a Miss Nagle, daughter of a brewer. They were married fifteen years ago. This was their first since a woman named Nell Bronson has sued Dunn and tried vainly to prove he was his wife.

One of Dunn's killings was that of Jimmy Gilbert, a prizefighter, in the Tivoli saloon, Chicago. Elliott backed out of a fight which had been arranged between Gilbert and Dunn went broke at the time having spent $1,000 for advertising and self-ads.

Illness Due to Injury.

Dunn's illness was due to an injury of the oesophagus he received in an accident on the Pennsylvania Railroad while going from Long Branch to New York in July, 1903. He was thrown forward from his seat against the back of the seat in front, striking on his chest. One rib was broken, and he was injured externally and internally. He sued the railroad and obtained $3,500. A cancerous growth developed in the oesophagus and last Spring Dunn went to San Francisco, where he had a racing stable, and underwent an operation.

NEWS OF THE THEATRES

Summer shows at theatre, park and beach still continue to their full glory, and the attendance grows larger with each do.

Keith's Theatre

The show at Keith's this week is one of those which only the farsightedness of the management could provide. Robert Hilliard is the big featured attraction in his intensely dramatic play, "As a Man Sows," and then there are the Seldoms, in a series of artistic posings; James F. Kay and Annie O'Brien in a farcical skit and Stuart Barnes, in the comedy department. Julia Ring, a former Boston girl, comes to Keith's next week.

Majestic Theatre

Light merrily does "The Tourists" continue on its way at the Majestic Theatre, it now in its fourth week and growing more popular at every performance. The easterwhales Richard Golden, Julia Sanderson, Alfred Hickman, Vera Michelena, William Pruette, Phil Ryley, Gertrude Selby, Howard Chambers, Albert Froom, W. J. Dewey, Anna C. The bears of "A Night Off" are now in progressed this will be the bill for the second wk beginning next Monday.

Colonial Theatre

This positively the last week of the engagent of Richard Carle and "The Mayor of Tokio," at the Colonial Theatre, and in the house will be closed for the Summ Only four more opportunities remain bridging the jollity of this Americ Japse comic opera which Mr. Carle wrote y himself and in which he has secure riple honors as librettist, star and mager.

Castle Square Theatre.

"Carmen" is renewing old acquaintance at the Castle Square this week, and Miss Albright's impersonation of the title character is increasing her reputation. The performance, as a whole, is worthigh per Spring. Next week a double bill, consisting of "Pinafore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," will be sung.

Tremont Theatre

Harry Bulger has solved the problem of driving away dull care, and his solution, as nightly shown at the Tremont Theatre, where he is enjoying himself in the all Summer play, "The Man From Now," he proves conclusively that "The Blues" can be cured and he is playing the part of a physician with special remedies for such ailments. He is a charming pacety.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"East Lynne" at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week is, as usual, a big success, especially with lady patrons. Miss Hunt plays the leading role and is superbly supported

Palace Theatre

Those who like good burlesque and vaudeville will enjoy the splendid bill at the Palace Theatre this week. The burlesque is far from, while the vaudeville bill is varied and entertaining

Austin & Stone's Museum

Solo, duet, quartet and chorus singing and some of the liveliest dancing ever seen on the museum stage are features of the "Way Down on the Old Plantation" show at Austin & Stone's this week. The music includes a repertoire of popular songs, old and plantation melodies and the latest rag time lingles

Paragon Park

Will fill the man who walks on a wire suspended 125 feet above the lagoon at Greater Paragon Park, is the bit of the free open air circus bill. Leon Schuyler also does a high dive into the lagoon that fabric takes folks breath away. Wolling's Trained Horses complete the circus bill.

LOST BABES FOUND, ASLEEP

Sleeping peacefully, clasped in each other's arms, little John O'Rourke, aged five, and John Downs, aged four, both of No. 1 Somerset place, Charlestown, were found in a doorway at Union square, Somerville. Still sleeping soundly they were carried to the Somerville police station by an officer and never awakened until their anxious parents came to claim them this morning.

The little fellows wandered from their homes yesterday afternoon and the entire police department of Boston was stirred up in a search for them last night, while they, totally unconscious of the trouble they were making, slumbered peacefully in the neighboring city.

The Roslick Animal Show and "From Hades to Paradise by Airship" are catching on in great style.

Norumbega Park

The floral parade of canoes on the Charles river Saturday afternoon will pass Norumbega Park just as the close of the performance in the open air theatre. The entertainment is furnished this week every afternoon and evening by the Trail troupe, Japanese acrobats; Fred Ray & Co., in a travesty sketch; Donovan & Arnold in a new act comedy; Leroy, Bonnell Company in a straight musical act, the Bellaire, comedy acrobats, and the Kenograph.

Wonderland

Wonderland, the new electrical city and mystic pleasure realm at Revere Beach, has steadily gained in popularity as the magnitude, multiplicity and merit of its amusement features have become known. The close of the schools and the first real series of hot days have sent thousands from the city to the seashore, with Wonderland as the objective point.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 28, 1906.

The "Ideals" of Massachusetts and Connecticut Trusts

Governor Guild Believes They Differ —Else Why Should He Have Favored One and Attacked the Other

It is an old saying that "corporations have no souls." It now appears, however, that, soulless as they are, they may become inspired by "ideals."

Governor Guild, when he and his political advisers determined that it was necessary for the Legislature to do something decent if the dominant party hoped to stand any chance before the voters next Fall, wrote a message to the Legislature advising it to pass a law to stop the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad from owning or controlling Massachusetts street railways.

This may or may not be good politics, but it is certainly somewhat ungrateful to a Connecticut corporation which has done as much for the dominant machine of the State as any of the trusts for which Massachusetts Senators and Representatives legislate.

As a concluding sentence of his message Governor Guild wrote:

> Let Massachusetts announce that transportation within her borders is in the future to be controlled by the people of Massachusetts and not by men beyond the reach of her laws and the inspiration of her ideals.

This is quite an interesting sentence, for several reasons. According to the Governor it would appear that a new definition of "good" and "bad" trusts has arisen—the "good" trusts being those in Massachusetts and the "bad" ones those outside.

It wouldn't be surprising if there were quite a few people in Massachusetts who failed to see it in just this way. The Boston & Maine Railroad, the Boston Elevated Railroad, the Consolidated Gas Company and several other corporations that might be named, including some powerful "brokerage" houses, have been under the influence of Massachusetts ideals for some time. Had their participation in recent legislation indicated a conversion to ideals different from those of any similar aggregations of capital?

Incidentally, it used to be one of the ideals of Massachusetts that the people of the State governed themselves. These ideals might have become operative if Governor Guild, by referendum, had given the people of Cambridge a chance to say whether they were willing to have $2,700,000 of their money presented to the Boston Elevated, and the people of Boston a chance to say whether they wished all competition from the north smothered.

Instead of this the Cambridge subway grab was signed on the same day that this idealistic message was written—BY GOVERNOR GUILD.

The Governor is right to a degree. The State of Massachusetts DOES need to be protected from the direction of its affairs by outside corporations, "which have not the inspiration of her ideals." But he might go farther. It also ought to be saved from the INTERNAL corporations, which at present exercise their own sweet will in its Legislature.

There is no better illustration of this need than the fact that such a steal as this Cambridge subway bill can be signed, in the face of public protest, by a Massachusetts Governor.

Wisdom From Sarah Bernhardt

A Great Deal of It in a Few Words

A very great woman is Sarah Bernhardt, the wonderful actress and wonderful old woman.

She talked to a reporter, and in less than thirty words gave advice that ought to be worth many times thirty thousand dollars (we figure everything in dollars nowadays) to each reader.

This is what Bernhardt says about her health, her wonderful power to work, her ability to play the part of a young woman, although she is a grandmother well over sixty. Read the words carefully. Cut them out. Think about them.

"I always sleep well. That is a great thing, SLEEP. I use my lungs well, too. That is a good thing. USE EVERY CELL IN THE LUNGS."

Sleep and fresh air—plenty of rest and careful, well-planned breathing—there you have the secret of health.

If you make it your business to get REGULAR sleep and if you make it your business, as Bernhardt says, to "Use every cell in the lungs," you will have solved the health problem practically. You will solve it ABSOLUTELY after you add to regular sleep and careful breathing slow and careful EATING.

The great philosopher Descartes would probably have died in early childhood but for the fact that his father and the Jesuits, whose school he attended, had sense enough to give him plenty of sleep.

And the poor old philosopher actually did die when he foolishly allowed himself to be persuaded by Queen Christina of Sweden to give her lessons in philosophy at five o'clock in the morning. He interrupted his sleep and killed himself to please his charming royal admirer.

As for breathing, remember that the breath is the ACTUAL LIFE.

Every cell in your lungs is an agent working for strength if you keep it constantly filled with fresh air. And everyone can be made into a disease spot if you neglect it.

MAKE BREATHING A BUSINESS.

Stand on the platforms of street cars and on the decks of ferryboats going to and from your work. Breathe with you chin in the air. Lifting the chin straightens the backbone and that, in turn, throws out the ribs, making room for the lungs to expand.

Take breaths so deep that you can feel the expansion of your lungs way down in the small of your back.

Keep your diaphragm expanded while you take in your breath and while you let it out. The movement of the diaphragm you can discover just where the ribs come together in front of you.

The careful breathing will be at first a nuisance and then a habit.

Once you have acquired the HABIT of taking at least five hundred good, deep breaths every day, you will be able to laugh at the doctors.

All this we have told you before, and we shall tell it often again. It takes good, healthy men to win the world's fights in these days. The great RECLUS has said that civilization is a matter of food—the better and the more plentiful the bread and the wider its distribution, the better the men and the civilization. Civilization is also a matter of good fresh air, even more than of food. Nature supplied the air free to all, as it supplies water to fishes in the ocean. Get plenty of it; don't imitate that unhealthy, foolish fish, the drowsy sucker, which keeps its nose in the mud and is fit for nothing. Breathe, sleep, work and THINK earnestly, regularly.

THE LANDLADY OBJECTS WHEN THEY PREPARE THEIR OWN MEALS

Unanswered Prayer

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

LIKE some schoolmaster, kind in being stern,
Who hears the children crying o'er their slates,
And calling, "Help me, Master!" yet helps not,
Since in his silence and refusal lies
Their self-development, so God abides
Unheeding many prayers. He is not deaf
To any cry sent up from earnest hearts;
He hears and strengthens when he must deny;
He sees us weeping over life's hard sums,
But should he give the key and dry our tears—
What would it profit us when school were done
And not one lesson mastered?
What a world
Were this if all our prayers were answered. Not
In famed Pandora's box were such vast ills
As lie in human hearts. Should our desires,
Voiced one by one in prayer, ascend to God
And come back as events shaped to our wish,
What chaos would result!

In my fierce youth
I sighed out breath enough to save a fleet,
Voicing wild prayers to heaven for fancied boons
Which were denied; and that denial bends
My knee to prayers of gratitude each day
Of my maturer years. Yet from those prayers
I rose always regirded for the strife
And conscious of new strength. Pray on, sad heart,
That which thou pleadest for not may be given,
But in the lofty altitude where souls
Who supplicate God's grace are lifted, there
Thou shalt find help to bear thy daily lot,
Which is not elsewhere found.

Little Editorials from the People

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR ALL

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Most people will agree with your editorial that it is better to worry about the man who has too little wealth than about the man with too much. We certainly need more men with $5 and $10 a day income, and if wealth went to those who earn it the return to labor would be the full earnings of labor. Unearned wealth is due to monopoly in all its various forms—monopoly of land, transportation, money. The protective tariff fosters trusts and enables the beneficiaries to reap the rubber profits of monopoly.

An equitable distribution of wealth can be established by adopting the Jeffersonian principle of "equal rights for all, special privileges to none."
